1988 COLONIAL

Everyone's favorite place! This building should look familiar to all. A popular quote among students involved in many activities was, "Gee, I feel like I live at this place."

Wouldn't it be easier if we could save these memories forever?

Wouldn't it be easier if

Nothing in life is easy. Let's face it, high school was not a time of pure perfection, a time for joy, laughter, and learning which every one of us enjoyed at every moment. That's the type of artificial high school experience only created by television, movies, or those teenage romance novels. For us, high school did have its high points, hot chocolate at a Colonial football game, acing the biology midterm, partying with friends Friday night: we'll never want to forget these times. But we also hit those lowest of lows when we all thought, "Wouldn't it be easier if...?" Failing a French exam, having a girl say "no" when asking for a date, getting cut from the tennis team: frustrations like these often got us down. They did, however, help us to grow up. And isn't that what high school is all about? The Seniors of '88 really needed all the growing up they could get, arriving as the first eighth graders at the high school, some only twelve years old. It might have been easier if SHS had given us only happy times, but come on, let's get real!

This couldn't possibly be a pep rally! Wouldn't it be great if we could get this assembly over with? These "Colonials" sit around in the gym, waiting for the national pledge of allegiance during Constitution Week.

YES, WE HAVE NO BANANAS!

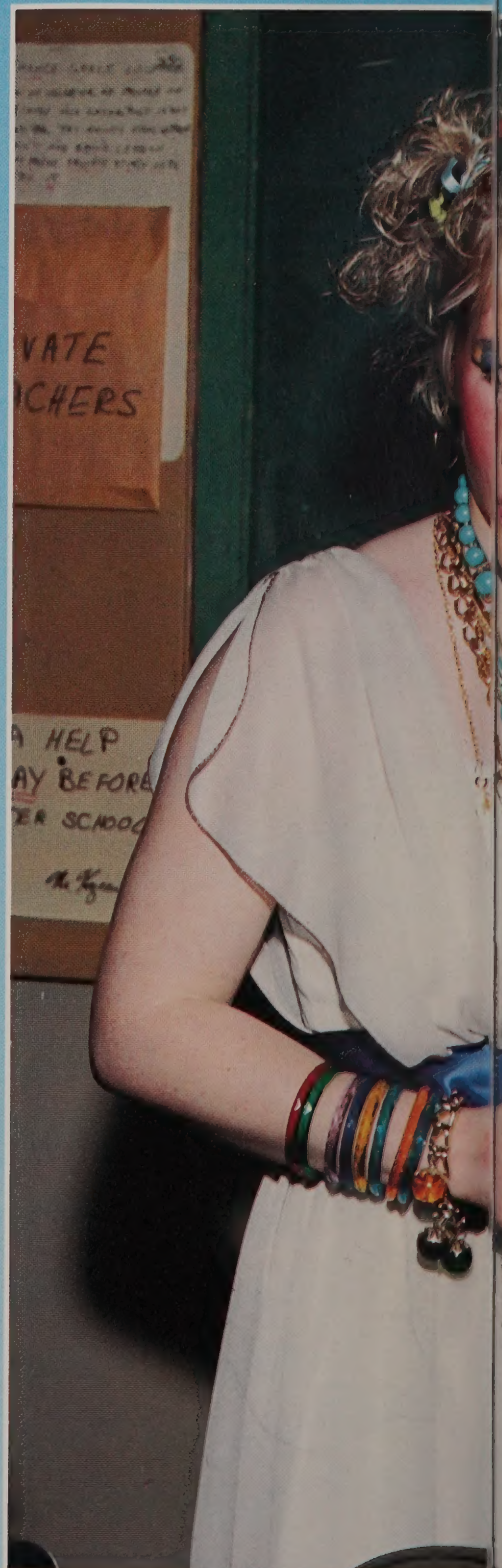

What happens when you combine thirty eager Juniors, a great director like Jack Feldheimer, and a script for a fabulous comedy? Well, the class of '88 gave a stupendous production of The Man Who Came to Dinner for their Junior Class Play. Work started in early October for the December 8, 9, and 10 performances. By the time these dates arrived, the cast not only learned the difference between stage left and stage right, but they also became veterans at having fun. The most enjoyment came from the actual performances, especially on Sunday when some members of the cast went "fruity" and inserted the word banana into their lines. Talk about crazy! Thanks to the funny script and the enthusiasm of the actors, the stage became a place for everyone to let loose with their drama talents. Backstage "went bananas" too!

AS IT A FLING OR A FLOP

"The Spring Fling? What was it? A dance, you say? I don't remember it."

That's probably because you didn't go. On March 23, 1987, the freshman class of 1990 sponsored a dance in the cafeteria. It could have been held in a closet...there were less than a dozen in attendance. It was a dreary, rainy Saturday night, and perhaps everyone else decided to stay in and watch T.V.

Everyone who did decide to dance the night away had an okay time, considering the turn-out. The dance was supposed to be a fundraiser, but sadly the class lost money. Wouldn't it have been better if people showed up?

Perhaps it should be mentioned that the Spring Fling was not the only dance at S.H.S. to flop. During the class of 1988's years at the high school, dances were rarely successful. Tickets were never bought ahead of time, and when people did attend, some were more likely to stand around and socialize rather than dance. Perhaps they just didn't know how to cut a rug!

HIS WAS THE TIME

Anxiety was the word preceeding our junior prom! The big question was...“How will I ever find a date?” Looking back now, it may seem funny, but prom stress caused a great many problems. Would the gym be decorated in time? Would the balloons still be hanging come Saturday night? Could girls invite boys? How about going without a date? You bet! It didn't matter as long as everyone arrived dressed to kill on May 9, 1987. The students partied it up in the sparkling blue and silver garden, dancing to the fast beat put out by The Commuters and the theme song, by Billy Joel, “This is the Time.”

Everyone can remember that junior year for the class of 1988 got off to a bad start. The first class assembly in the fall was horrendous, and things really got out of hand when students started arguing about where the prom would be held. Luckily, the class pulled itself together, made apologies for its behavior during the assembly, and started working together towards a common goal...a great year with a really fun prom. Adviser Mr. Rose helped organize the Prom Committee to decorate the gym. Brian DiBenedetto drew up the idea for a country park with gazebos and a bandstand, which came to life when the decorating started. The three other advisers, Mrs. Calimeris, Mrs. Bagley, and Mrs. Dhimi, put in their efforts with fundraising, invitations, and finding a caterer. Dinner was roast beef or chicken, but with all of the dancing going on, no one really wanted to stuff their stomachs!

Prom night brought balmy and beautiful weather, with a gentle breeze billowing the girls' satiny dresses. The boys looked more debonair than ever imaginable in their handsome tuxedos. Prom night '87 was certainly “a time to remember.”

Top right: Caryn Figueras puts the finishing touches on the bandstand.

Isn't there a perfect ten in this court? Jen Powderly, Charmaine Surette, Corinne Spangler, Jen Jewell, and Tracy Favreau are chosen by the band.

B EACH CLUB 1987!

I woke up.
I felt gritty sand on my pillow case.
I smelled the stench of rotting seaweed seeping through my window.
I heard seagulls loudly squawking outside.
I saw the blinding sunlight filling my room.
I tasted the sickeningly salty air.

I knew it.
I was still at the beach, enjoying my summer vacation.
Summer was a time for fun, relaxation, and soaking up the sun. Though most students worked away many hours, they also found time to unwind after a long school year. Some families took vacations to "get away from it all," perhaps to Maine, Rhode Island, or the Cape. The hottest spot was the beach. Hampton was a famous attraction, but some chose a quieter place like Hopkington State Park.

What about those who stuck around town? Well, Friendly's was always filled with at least two tables of kids from S.H.S., and White City Cinemas was a movie theater of choice. Students also hung around Dean Park, the Drive-in, and wherever an outdoor party happened to spring up.

Summer always went by too quickly. In 1987 the first day of school came on September 2, before Labor Day, and took everyone by surprise. It sure would have been better if the summer was longer!

ICE HOCKEY IN THE SUMMER

Travel was the most exciting thing to do in the summer. In 1987 many teens had the chance to visit some wonderful places. European vacations made for wonderful memories. And students, especially because of their foreign language classes, were ready to explore the world.

Ice hockey in the summer? In France? Yes! Trina Bourget, class of '89, had a special experience in July. She traveled to Amneville, France, for a program called Euro-Ed sports, in which she played hockey and learned the French language.

Senior Betsy Clark also joined a foreign exchange program, but her destination was Spain. She toured the country with a group of new American friends, but also lived with a Spanish family for several weeks. Said Betsy, "It was one of the best times of my life."

Barbara Felkel, an Austrian who attended Shrewsbury High during the 86-87 school year, received a visit from senior Joanna Dunn. Joanna had the chance to visit Barbara's home city of Vienna, the capitol of Austria, during the month of August. "The world isn't as big as I thought it was," said Joanna, "and friendships certainly can span the miles of distance."

It wasn't necessary to go to Europe, however, to have a great experience over the summer. Ruby Smith, class of '88, joined the Massachusetts Advanced Studies Program, being one of the 200 accepted students from over 400 applicants. Taking grueling courses in Biochemistry and Journalism, Ruby discovered that her summer at Milton Academy was definitely a learning experience. But when not studying, she found time to visit Boston, play ultimate frisbee, and sing in a chorus. Ruby said, "the best part was meeting many interesting teenagers from all over the state."

Right: In July '87, the four chief editors of the yearbook staff went to Bryant College for a workshop. Melissa McCue laughs as she tries to come up with a theme.

R?

What a peaceful summer for Brian Keeley!

Trina Bourget experienced culture shock when she steps into a European bathroom. What is that thing...a cross between a toilet and a sink?

Out on the ice, Trina Bourget could be in any country and still feel at home. Her Euro-ed hockey instructor gave her an excellent report at the end of the program, noting her great enthusiasm.

There she stood: an image of beauty, the love of your life; some rusted chrome did not detract from her provocative stance; a missing hubcap only added character; her grill held back a roaring engine; but flaws seemed only to improve her; she was your first car.

It began months before: the long struggle for your quest to drive. The outcome would be so rich: new freedom, frolic, fun! You sat through the long hours of Mr. Sullivan's drivers' education class, leaving with a complete knowledge of the six-way power seat, horror stories of those who failed their license tests, and recollections of such bloody box-office thrillers as "Signal Thirty."

That real-life experience called "on the roads" followed next. Confined to a car embarrassingly marked STUDENT DRIVER, with an intimidating instructor judging your every move and no radio to listen to, your first lesson was almost always a disaster. In many a case, it was fortunate that the instructor had his own set of brakes! What may have been worse than being the student driver was being the student observer. Sitting in a car being driven by a student who didn't know the reason behind stop signs was never fun.

Finally, you reached the much awaited goal, the license test. A frantic parent sat in the back struggling to keep quiet as you pulled your "three point turn," narrowly missing a collision with a Mercedes and a bus. A sense of sheer relief and accomplishment set in as the registry officer completed the license form with the golden word "pass." You held that pink slip close to your heart, and decided to buy some fuzzy dice to hang from your car's rear-view mirror as a self-congratulatory present.

EASY MONEY?

Movies cost at least four bucks. Gasoline was about a dollar a gallon. A tape by a favorite rock group could run about eight dollars. Stopping for a snack at the AM/PM could clean out a wallet. Being a teenager was expensive!

How did kids afford it? Well, they worked hard for their money, many students putting in full-time over the summer and part-time after school. It was not only extra expenses that they had to pay for; many were earning their college tuitions. Whether students were employed as waitresses, cashiers, or stock people, local businesses depended on them as reliable workers. Two seniors who held more unusual jobs were Erin McCann, who videotaped the activities on board the UMASS hospital helicopter ambulance, and Melissa McCue, who worked as a secretary at Hahnemann hospital's X-ray department. Olde Shrewsbury Village was probably the most popular spot for S.H.S. students to find jobs. Working was never easy, but it certainly paid off!

L OCKING IT UP?

At first glance, you might have assumed that the subject of lockers at S.H.S. was the most boring topic imaginable. Who cared about a skinny little closet (only 7 inches in width) where a jacket could be hung and books stored? Lockers may have seemed plain, drab, and unoriginal. Even with their new coats of blue and gold paint, they really didn't seem to add much to the decor of the hallways. Perhaps a few may have had cute stickers or written messages on their doors, but that was nothing special.

It was only when the door was opened that the true personality of a student's locker jumped out. Housing posters of scantily clad men or women, or mirrors and memo pads, cut-outs from magazines, streamers, and photos of friends, many lockers were elaborately decorated. The girl with a perpetual cold had a box of tissues hanging in her locker, and the hungry boy whose appetite never quit had a storehouse supply of Ring Dings. A problem with the locker of an athlete was the stench of rotting sneakers. Wouldn't that have been a good place for a "stick-up"? Some students decided to pair up and share a locker, maybe because one was assigned to a locker way down at the end of the hall, or simply because it was fun. Wherever it was, and however it was decorated, the locker was the one part of the school which was really for the student's own private use. Looking back, did your locker have its own personality?

The things were called lockers, but most students didn't even bother to use locks.

200 YEARS OF FREEDOM

We the people at Shrewsbury High School were head over heels in celebration during the week of September 13, better known as Constitution Week. Everywhere we looked there were reminders of the foundation of our country. The halls were filled with red, white, and blue balloons and crepe paper. The festivities included hallway decoration, poster, essay, trivia, and flag contests, as well as guest speakers, a nationwide pledge of allegiance, and a living flag.

Students and faculty paraded to the Town Hall on Thursday the 16 to participate in the burying of a Time Capsule. Mr. Cote, Mr. Brunell, and Mr. Siff all traveled back in time to adorn authentic-looking colonial costumes. These "Yankee Doodles" certainly showed their patriotic spirit as they sweated in their ruffled shirts and heavy jackets under the hot sun. The women weren't afraid to show their patriotism either. Mrs. Amy O'Leary, who organized the entire week, adorned a full-length colonial gown and a little cap, as did Mrs. LaBelle, Mrs. Bilodeau, and Dr. Courschesne. The entire student council were also expected to adorn patriotic garb. Beth Gordon looked stunning in an old bridesmaid's dress from her mother's closet. Others chose more simply to go "red, white, and blue."

When Friday the 18th brought the week to a close, contest winners were announced. The fabulous decorations in the hallways, however, remained long after the week was over. Some of us may have felt that we'd heard enough about the Constitution to last us three lifetimes, but still, we all were glad to be Americans, with our much appreciated freedoms and rights.

COLLEGE CONFUSIONS?

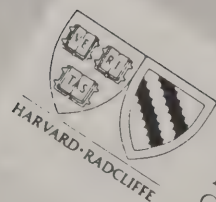

On the morning of October 6th there was a feeling of excitement running through the veins of many Seniors. This was the day on which we, three buses worth of the class of 1988, were to converge upon the grounds of Clark University to attend the College Fair. The prospect of leaving school for almost four entire classes had been too tempting for many of us to pass up.

After the short ride through Worcester, we disembarked the buses and were surprised to see so many other kids already there. We followed the masses into the gymnasium and found ourselves standing amidst hundreds of tables, each one proudly displaying a sign, representative, and banner from a school. Each of us scanned the first of the college representatives in attendance and began our own journey collecting viewbooks, applications, and advice.

Though we Seniors were allowed one and a half hours to meander through the aisles of tables, this seemed to be much more time than most of us needed. We began filing out of the fair and to the buses at least a half hour early. This extra time was put to use by thumbing through catalogues, talking about the colleges to friends, or simply gazing out the window at the other high school kids who would be the "competition" for college admittance. The day helped many of us to gain more knowledge about the opportunities available. Still a common quote among the nervous future college freshman was "Ohhh, I don't want to be a Senior!"

Bill Thompson, John McManis, and others still give a hearty hand to the seniors.

WAKE UP, SLEEPY HEADS!

Someone famous once said, "The sunrise and I are old friends." Good for him because the sunrise certainly didn't have too many friends at S.H.S. In fact, the sunrise, or morning in general, was a student's worst enemy. This was the time of day when kids' brains worked at their lowest speed, when they should have been rearing and ready for a new day. If we took a closer look at what went on in a student's home on a typical early morning, this was probably what would have been found.

Bringggggg!!! Mopey-morning Matt just couldn't understand it, he had just gone to bed. However, the alarm didn't take any notice of his distress. It continued to ring and ring. Oh, that horrible noise! Matt reached over and whammed that little button on top of the clock. Phew...silence.

The student's weary body was still sleeping, but something in his mind told him that it was time that he had to get up. It certainly was not his own will that dragged Matt out of bed this rainy morning. It was more of a reflex, or an instinct. Matt could barely open his eyes, but made his way to the shower, where most of the parts of his body started to wake up. He was still in a sort of coma, but walked back to his room, where his eyes met a frightening sight. The clock read 7:12! Only three minutes to catch the bus! Forget combing the hair, and don't worry about what clothes to wear, the only thing Matt needed to do was to get some breakfast into his stomach.

Wearing old sweatpants and a T-shirt found underneath his bed, Mopey Matt ran into the kitchen. The box of Wheaties on the table was empty, and the cupboards were bare. The dog and his sister were gobbling up the last two Eggos. Matt was desperately starving, and extremely mad at the dog, so he grabbed the dog food from the dish marked "Fido" and sprinted to the bus stop. Oh no, would he be too late to catch the bus?

No, he stood out there in the pouring rain only to find out that the bus was later than he. Ten more minutes went by, just enough time to assure that Matt would be thoroughly drenched, and then the garish yellow vehicle pulled up to the stop. Matt boarded the bus and maneuvered his way down the aisle, but all the seats were occupied by noisy, screaming kids. Standing up, his exhausted and now wet body still cried out for sleep. A terrible thought hit him. He had forgotten his ten-page term paper sitting on his dresser, the reason he had stayed up 'till 1:30 A.M.. Too late now. Matt's blood-shot eyes looked down at his feet to find that he was wearing one blue Nike sneaker and one white Reebok. The dog food was sitting heavily in his stomach, and he really started to feel sick. Mopey-morning Matt knew that it was going to be a fine, fine day.

Noel Christopher struts in from the parking lot.

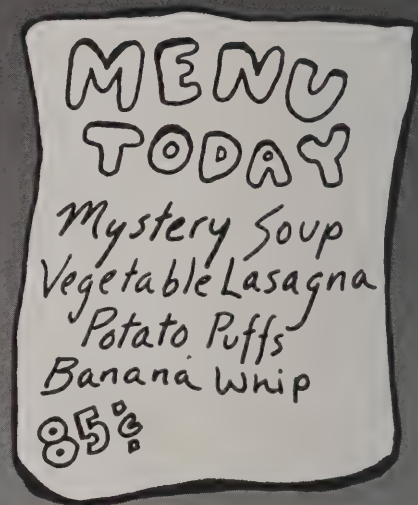

Sheila Cousineau better hurry to class.

CALORIE CONSCIOUS?

I went into the bathroom and took off all my clothes, even my socks. Then I removed my jewelry, just in case. Oh no, the moment of truth had arrived: how much did I really weigh? The scale was my lethal enemy, a horrible device which had been invented just to destroy my self-confidence. Oh no, looking at the dial on the scale, I knew I shouldn't have eaten that triple-decker sandwich or that banana split

The American society appealed to being skinny and looking like models. Diet drinks, low-calorie meals, and intensive exercise programs were in high demand. In senior surveys, boys didn't seem to be "calorie counters." Only a few responded that they'd tried diets. On the other hand, far more than half the girls were "on again, off again" dieters. Though some, such as Barbara Shernig or Cynthia Paskalis, didn't have to worry about calories, many tried to set specific diet regiments. One must admit, however, that fast food restaurants and school lunches were sometimes difficult to overlook. Diets usually lasted only until third period arrived, when one couldn't resist the snack bar any longer, or until one went out for pizza with friends. The most common aspect of diets was that once a dieter cheated, she always decided that, "I'll go back on my diet, but starting tomorrow!"

STYLE-O-RAMA

Classes began on September 2, 1987, and once again, the trends were obvious. Not only were the halls carpeted with bumbling students searching for their classes, but they were covered with denim. Not just any denim, mind you, but acid-washed denim. Many paired their jeans with store-bought tie-dyed t-shirts which hit the market in 1987, though most of us agreed that a shirt was only a true tie-dye if you got down and did it yourself. Lauri Openchowski surely made the statement that hippie was "in."

Girls were seen wearing anything from high-heeled spikes to high-top converse sneakers. Stretch pants, mini skirts, and colorful sweaters bought at Benneton, Esprit, or the Limited were the only clothes for some. Boys usually fell behind the fashion trends, or else didn't even care to notice them. These fashion "duds" sported plain old cords and sweatshirts, average haircuts, and worn-out Nike's. However, the few "fashion plates," such as Sean Belanger, Ashby Richardson, Noel Christopher, and Alex Argento, could have stepped out of GQ wearing ties, baggy pants, and leather loafers.

Kids who knocked the basic trends chose other fashions. From long hair and metal t-shirts to spiked hair and long black trench coats, every imaginable "look" had its own group of followers. Marissa Markarian was a real stand-out with her thick mane of black hair, and Michelle Hill always looked stylish. And to be sure, fashion was never as important as style!

"Home, home on the range..."

"Joe, what the heck are you singing?"

"Well, Jenny, Homecoming's this Friday night."

"So, its nothing to get excited about- just a football game."

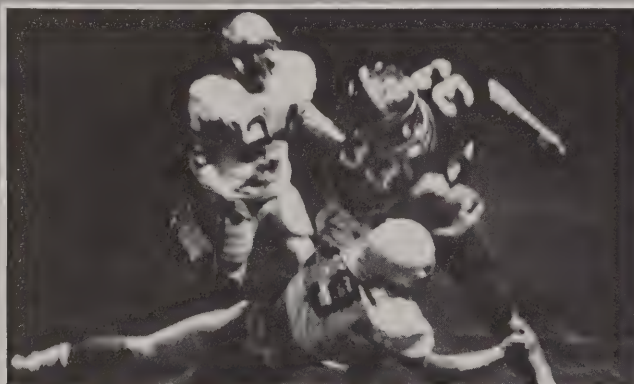

"No, there's gonna be a cafeteria decoration contest, and a dance following the game. Hey, Jen, would you wanna go with me?"

"Well, sure, I guess so. I didn't have any other plans. Hmm, I hope we win the game."

S.H.S. did win. The Colonials won big, 28-0, over Clinton. Homecoming brought in a big crowd, and cars filled the parking lots of the high school and middle school. Many alumni showed their school spirit by showing up. Even Mr. Ferris, the former headmaster, made an appearance. After the game, some students chose to attend the dance, but a number of upperclassmen opted to make their own parties. Whatever way students chose to celebrate, Homecoming was an exciting night.

WICKED WEEKENDS!

Sure, I "T.G.I.F." along with everybody else. Thank God It was Friday! No one enjoyed weekdays, getting up early and sitting in classrooms until two in the afternoon. Unfortunately, I also found it difficult to enjoy my weekends. I was a victim of the "Weekend Blues."

The Weekend Blues was not a deadly disease, but it certainly was dreadful. Easily diagnosed, its symptoms were obvious. The first warning signal was a terrible feeling of anxiety whenever someone mentioned the word "weekend." What would I be doing come Friday night? Please, don't tell me that it would have been another movie at White City or a boring hour at the AM/PM hanging around in desperation for word of a party.

Everyone experienced the Weekend Blues at some time or another. For me, the disease reached its worst point one Saturday night when I wasn't grounded but decided that I had to stay in anyway. There simply was nothing else to do. Well, at least I thought there was nothing else to do. Little did I know that my neighbor around the corner, who was in my English class, was having a huge bash at his house, but I wasn't invited. On that weekend night, I felt like a lonely loser. The Weekend Blues really hurt.

Isn't Carrie Austin too mature to be enjoying McDonaldLand?

Sean Belanger apparently prefers to nap over the weekend.

Wouldn't it be easier if the halls weren't wall to wall people?

The bell rang and the halls filled with hundreds of students and faculty making it almost impossible to arrive on time with only four minutes for passing. Eighth graders barrelled into everyone as they literally ran to every class carrying all their books in bookbags. The freshmen girls stopped traffic as they stood blocking the corridors, wishing a senior boy would look their way. And of course how could anyone get by the group of loud football players at those freshmen hopefuls? The tardy bell would ring, and the teachers would take their markbooks making sure to take note of the scurrying latecomers.

Ohh, the hallways are so crowded! The students of S.H.S. pass to their fourth period class.

A Note To Our Advisers

Mrs. Calimeris, Mr. Rose, Mrs. Bagley, and Mrs. Dhami, we thank you for all of the time and energy you've put into the development of our class. You've seen us through fundraisers, the play, and the proms. You've also helped us through the very sorrowful times in our lives, the deaths of our classmates. We will remember you with fondness because of all of your understanding and support.

Thank you,

Will we remember all of these faces 10 years from now? - the grimaces of the starting football lineup, friendly smiles, a gang of classmates, fellow athletes, or dramatic friends...

REUNION...

It wasn't that I really wanted to attend my class reunion, but I felt somewhat obligated to go and see whether the rest of my classmates were complete failures or not. I pulled into Shrewsbury High parking lot in the same Dodge I had driven to school ten years earlier. Looking around the parking lot, I noticed an awful lot of Hyundais.

There was music playing inside from "our era." I suppose you could call it the disco of the eighties. I couldn't stop from laughing; bands and artists that had once been held in highest esteem were now lucky to be remembered. Oh well, at least there were no video screens. Videos were another part of eighties' culture that people had (wrongly) assumed would live on forever. I didn't miss them.

The gym had been decorated with streamers and balloons, and I figured that it had been set by the same people who had set up these sorts of things when we were all in high school. No matter; it looked nice enough, and the catering was superb (although if I hadn't personally eaten the last piece of our NHS cake, senior year, I would have sworn it had been waiting all these eons...).

Most of the people looked fatter, I must admit - possibly from one too many beer - drinking marathons in college. There were a few I didn't recognize at all, but for the most part it was the Class of '88. I waded throughout the crowd, noticing that the same cliques that had existed ten years ago were now reforming tonight. I was no exception; I smiled and said hello to a few acquaintances, but almost immediately located my closest friends.

They were fine, of course. One was married, two were divorced. Some one was in advertising, some one else was a psychiatrist. Everyone was doing JUST FANTASTIC and making loads of money and having a great life. Well, the gang was ringed together in the middle of the gym, joking around, laughing, reminiscing, but I must admit that as the evening wore on I was becoming more and more uncomfortable. I was looking at my past, but it was distorted from the way I had remembered it. A girl I had been fond of in high school started telling me about her three children. I didn't even recognize someone who had been in my English class for four years. I smiled, sipped my drink, and eyed my watch as people started rambling about their thriving businesses.

The last Hyundai had driven off and I was sitting alone in the gym, finishing off the punch. I figured I could stand another evening like this one in ten years. "It feels like only yesterday that I was here." I said to myself. Chuckling at my own joke, I picked up my broom and started sweeping up the fallen decorations that someone had put up with such care.

SO TYPICAL

A TYPICAL DAY IN THE ALL - TOO TYPICAL LIFE OF A TYPICAL STUDENT

6:30 Alarm goes off.

7:15 Student gets up.

7:30 a) Tries to understand the complexities of an automobile engine without training, in order to get his/her car started.

b) Scurries around house as his/her ride honks impatiently in the driveway, waking the neighborhood.

c) Chokes on CO exhaust fumes from his/her school bus.

8:01 Student is verbally browbeaten in school for being so lax about rules regarding punctuality.

8:02 First period teacher recites the same speech as above (see 8:01) to tardy (but typical) student.

8:40 Student wakes up.

Student wanders aimlessly around hall when he/she is again called for flouting school laws. This is repeated until lunch (11:30, or 11:58.)

11:59 a) Student eats a delicious lunch.

12:00 Student eats a school-prepared

12:30 Once again, the student is late...

12:53 Student is awakened by a loud bang. No one knows what it was or where it came from, but it was awfully loud.

12:53:24 Back to sleep.

1:12 Bell rings, although the magic of its first toll has long since worn off.

1:16 Student arrives at his/her last period class.

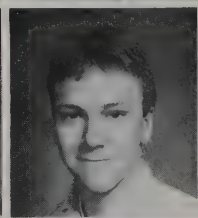

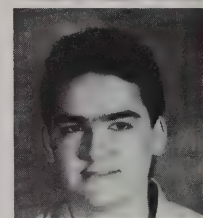

1:18 Finds his/herself staring intently at the clock.

1:19 Falls asleep.

1:23 Student is called upon in class. Wakes up just in time to get the answer wrong and never hear the end of it.

1:25 Falls asleep.

1:33 Teacher slams hard on student's desk with something very heavy, waking him/her up. Student is "third-degreed" about sleeping in class, but insists he/she was simply conducting dream research for a science project.

1:34 Teacher doesn't buy it.

1:37 The student's dream research continues...

1:44 Some one taps on student's shoulder, passing the homework up the row.

1:45 Student panics, upon remembering he/she forgot the assignment.

1:47 Teacher notes absence of student's paper. Student eyes the second - story window with suicidal intent.

1:48 Zzzzzzzz.

1:52 Something must be wrong with the clock. Six minutes seem like six months.

1:57:55 Clock stops dead. Student screams.

7:12 Student wakes up and realizes it was all a bad dream. His/her parent enters the room explaining it is time to go to school and that he/she is already late.

7:13 Student complains about not getting enough sleep.

TYPICAL MODEL

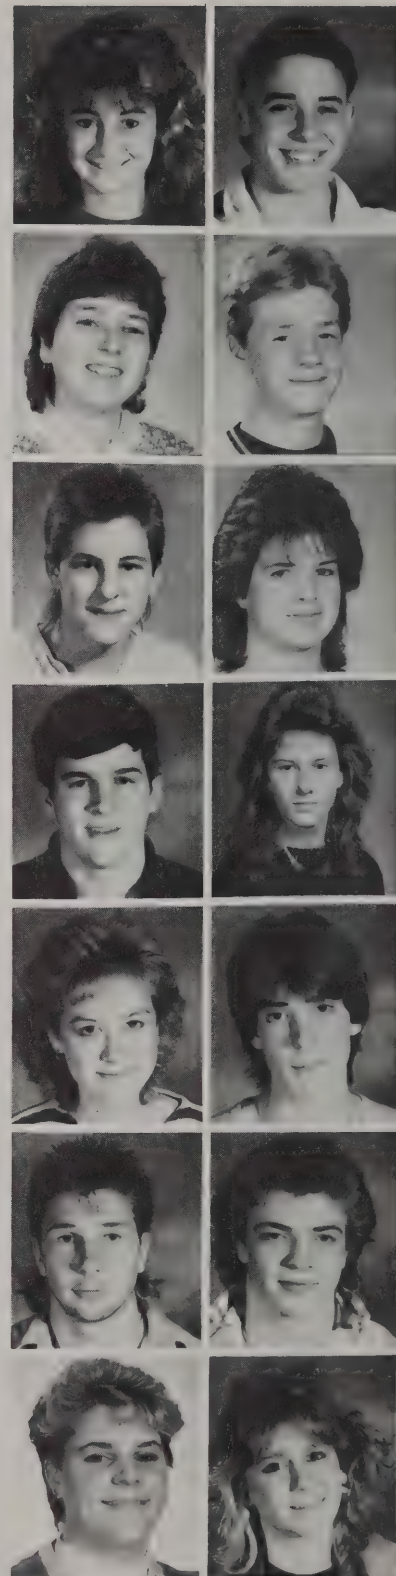

Junior Jessica Colby has come a long way from riding her trike, asking if "Snoopy could come out and play," and frolicking with next door neighbors on Tanglewood Drive. Who would have guessed that twelve years later Jessica would be a model for the La Femmina Modeling Studio in Worcester! She has become a familiar face in the Worcester paper as both model of the year for them as pictured on their advertisement.

Jessica recently traveled to Miami, Florida through the Models Limited Agency where she competed against girls fifteen through seventeen in the Miss Teen Hemisphere Pageant. Before this she had become Miss Teen Hemisphere New Hampshire. Jessica stated that her "main goal in modeling is to someday work with Jean Renard in Boston." Who knows, maybe someday we'll see Jessica as Miss America or Miss Universe!

Tsk, tsk, Gary Gary Gary... What would your mother say? You've humiliated your wife and family, the entire population of the United States of America, and every cheating husband in the world-- you got caught, Gary. Next time you go to a tropical island, leave the camera at home. And, don't let your girlfriend bring a friend. Oh, and hey Donna, I'd think about finding some new friends. And Why oh Why did Gary have to be your main dude? To make you famous (or should I say infamous??). Well, you were right. He did send you to the cover of PEOPLE magazine as one of the year's top bimbos. But now, he's back in the '88 race and you've lost your job. No excuses?? Yeah, right.

Yes indeed, the newspapers were full of scandal throughout the year. But Americans were not the only ones on the front page. Prince Charles and Princess Diana's pictures were also splattered on those tabloids. "Chuck and Di... a divorce?" No way, they're royalty. They can't do that! The British press were unmerciful in reporting minor qualms between the couple and wrongly assuming a divorce was inevitable. Did she really have a "commoner" as a boyfriend? Was he shopping for a new wife on their anniversary? Who would have custody of Harry and William? These questions and more were

TACKY TABLOID

"So Sue Me!"

Although the media is almost always full of celebrity headlines, this year brought a twist to the news. Instead of the celebrities being in front of the camera or on stage, they were in the courtroom suing each other, divorcing one another, or pursuing other strange cases that landed them before a judge.

Mathias Rust, a West German teenager, was made an American hero when he flew into Moscow's Red Square. The Soviets weren't too fond of this kid as they sentenced him to three years in a Moscow prison for violating their air space.

Another "hero" was made this past summer when the Iran-Contra hearings were aired during soap opera time. Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North, National Security Council Staffer, was brought before the specially selected Committee to be fudged on his actions. Apparently, North and his buddies sold weapons to Iran to try and get the hostages freed. They then took the money from the sales and gave it to the Contras in Central America. Despite "Ollies" good wishes, the hostages still remain far from home.

Speaking of North, olliemanina has since calmed down, which didn't go unrecognized by the makers of the Ollie doll. John Lee and Shana Hudson realized the Lt. Col. was a fad after losing $30,000, so using creativity and practicality, the company changed the head and clothes of the doll to fit the style and look of Mikhail Gorbachev, General Secretary of the U.S.S.R. The doll was to be sold for $19.95.

The business world is tough and even Teddy Ruxpin knows that. His company has filed for bankruptcy.

David Letterman was given a bit of a scare when Martha Raye, a spokesperson for Polident Denture Creme, slapped a lawsuit on Dave's back. Apparently, Raye was "humiliated" when Dave referred to her as a "condom user." Luckily, the judge threw the case right out of the window.

Divorce courts attracted a lot of attention as celebrities split up in messy separations.

Peter Holm, alleged Swedish rock star, created a ruckus when Joan Collins, "Dynasty" villainess decided to call their marriage quits. As the saying goes, "breaking up is hard to do."

Also in the divorce courts was Sylvester Stallone and Brigitte Neilson, both low budget movie actors. Madonna "Material Girl" and Sean "Slugger" Penn were on their way to the court, but Madonna, like a typical woman, decided to give their marriage another try.

While still in the Justice Department, the Supreme Court System was shaken up a bit when a justice had to be appointed. President Ronald Reagan recommended Judges Robert Bork and Alan Ginsburg for the job. Much controversy followed these announcements, and the selection committee ended up rejecting both of them; Bork because he disagreed with previous Supreme Court decisions and Ginsburg because he had smoked marijuana once in the heyday of his youth.

After Ginsburg's admission, presidential candidates started confessing past sins. Albert Gore, Jr. (Dem) also admitted to "experimenting" with weed. Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis' (Dem) wife Kitty announced that she was once addicted to diet pills.

People weren't the only ones who made news. Pit Bull Terriers continued to attack people, including children, their owners, and the elderly. The pit bull itself was not at fault, though. It was the type of training the owners sometimes gave the dogs that caused the violent behavior. So much for putting faith in dogs; not to mention humans, too.

Speaking of human faith, a maimed man is being sued by the people who handicapped him. Brian Willson, an anti-war demonstrator, thought that he could prove his point by blocking a Navy train carrying weapons. Well, the train ran over him, he sacrificed his legs, and now the train operators are suing him for mental anguish. Also, Willson had planned on suing the Navy for damages.

SO TYPICAL

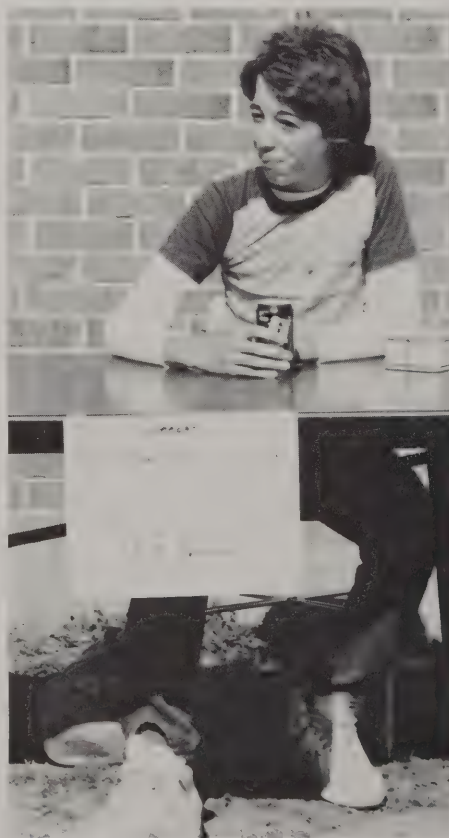

The Typical Couch Potato

The couch potato is defined as: a growth found on one's couch that survives by eating, sleeping and carrying out all necessary life functions in front of an ever-active television set. Typically, many SHS students return home promptly each day to abandon their homework and themselves to the couch. The change begins quickly and soon the student is none other than a couch potato: flabby and mindless.

The agenda of the afternoon's T.V. watching is a tour through three of the most popular soaps, Days of Our Lives, Guiding Light, and General Hospital. After the soaps follow talk with Oprah, adventure with Magnum, justice from Wapner, and a challenging spin from the Wheel of Fortune. During the commercial breaks if a couch potato is not replenishing the chip bowl or refilling the soda glass, they find MTV a suitable substitute to escape the boredom.

There is however a rare breed of couch potato that only shows its hulking body during prime time and on weekends. Favorite week night picks are St. Elsewhere, Who's the Boss, Family Ties, The Cosby Show, Thirty Something, and L.A. Law; while weekends hold a captive audience with Saturday morning cartoons and cable movies. One must remember that these sofa growths are not dangerous, and will eventually shrink out of existence if the source of stimulus is removed to reveal the hidden student inside.

"Is there a John Hancock at Shrewsbury High School?"

Last year approximately twenty-six students and staff were members of the Constitutional Convention. Meeting for about an hour every Tuesday afternoon, these members drew up a Constitution that would provide for a democratic system of government. Headed by senior Gary Noroian and Mr. Mickey Brandmeyer, the group spent many long hours in discussion and debate molding a government to fit Shrewsbury High School. The plan was widely aproved by students, but defeated by the faculty. Hopefully, the process can be reworked and someday put into effect.

A pleasant afternoon in the courtyard is spent by Tina Forrister, Virginia Crockett, Darlene Heckman, Cheryl George, and Melissa O'Keefe.

SO TYPICAL

TYPICAL DREAM BOY

Blond hair, a muscular build, gorgeous green eyes, and a well tanned body were in my scope of view. The wheels of my mind began to turn and the above stats were processed to form a searing thought; I was looking at the most fantastic, mint, wicked, bad, fine male species I had ever seen. This dude was a list-topper in my book of Marvi-Males.

I can't describe my excitement or my wonder. How could this boy have escaped my notice, "Was he a NEW STUDENT?" A closer inspection of his handsome face revealed some familiarities. Something stuck in mind about his features. It now

FRESHMAN FOCUS: CARL DANIELSON

This tall, blond, blue-eyed, Scandinavian is a third-generation Danielson at Shrewsbury High School. Freshman, Carl Danielson, enjoys playing golf, tennis, basketball, and fishing. He plays on Shrewsbury's Varisity golf team. Carl has traveled to Bermuda, Norway, and Sweden.

In the summer, Carl spends his time at Cape Cod waterskiing, fishing, and swimming. Although Carl enjoys his time spent at the Cape, he prefers a more tropical climate like that of the Carribean or Hawaii.

In school, English is Carl's favorite subject. He states "I like it because I do well in it and because it's interesting."

occurred to me that I had seen him before. It was Marvin Wedgie! But what miracle had been performed in our school to turn last year's lowest toad into the talk of SHS's social circles. At first I thought my taste was slipping and I was lowering my criteria. A confirmation from my friend reaffirmed my faith in my judgement but I was still incredulous. If mother nature changed her ugly hairy caterpillars to butterflies over the summer, I couldn't wait to see what next fall would bring!

"Shorties" were sick of typical comments.

Do comments like "Hey kid, why don't you stand up? - Oh you are!" or "how's the weather down there?" make your skin crawl? Then you probably suffer from shortness. Why do we say "suffer," you ask? Well, if you were short you would know what we're talking about. When you are short you have to walk around all day seeing nothing but other people's stomachs and the dust on the top of the counter at the bank. If you have walked through the halls between classes at any time this past year you would have noticed many miniature beings zipping up and down. We finally caught up with some of those miniature beings and asked their opinion of how it felt to be short. Many thought it "stunk" and were praying they would get about five inches for Christmas. Some actually felt that being short had its advantages. They pointed out their easy maneuverability in a crowded hallway, the fact that the top of their locker always stays clean, and that they can easily hide behind the person in front of them to avoid being called on in class. So is being short good or bad? You'll have to decide for yourself.

TYPICAL FUNDRAISER

The freshmen are always supposed to look up to the sophomores. Sophomores are superior. They have had more experience, more knowledge, and of course, they are more cool. The sophomore fundraiser, therefore, should have been an inspirational event for the freshmen. This, however, was not the case. A great majority of these underclassmen did not even realize the sophomores were having a fundraiser and half of those who did realize it did not know that they were selling candybars. Some of the freshmen commented that the fundraiser was "dumb" and that "anyone could sell candy bars better than they did." Well, maybe the freshmen should try to outsell the sophomores. Any bets?

According to Miss Krause, a sophomore adviser, the class did fairly well with the fundraiser - so well in fact that they ran out of candy bars. The only fear she has is that the sophomores are eating more than they are selling. "In the end," she said, "it will be the sophomores themselves who owe all of the money."

PRIVATE SCHOOL?

All the 8th graders' frightened little faces stared up at me as I approached them. Who knows what they thought I was going to ask, but they sure looked scared. Smiles of relief appeared when I simply asked what school they were planning to attend next year. Some kids didn't answer, but the majority said that they would remain at S.H.S. Out of approximately 30 students questioned, 20 said they would stay. A few said they would be going to private school. Reasons for leaving included their parents, their own choice, and possibly just for a change. Those who said that they were staying said it with a smile and were looking forward to 4 more years at S.H.S.

Hey Mrs. Calimeris! Where do you think you are? Hampton Beach?

Rules For Grade 8 Survival

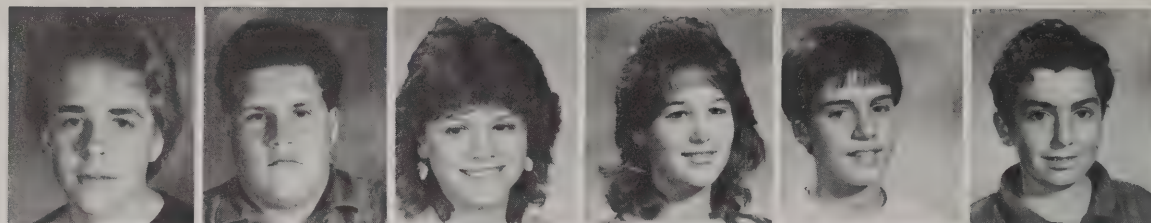

1. Be in the right class.
2. Take the right bus.
3. Don't waste time trying to find the infamous pool and sauna on the third floor.
4. Don't plan on attending Pep Rallies.
5. Always worship seniors - DON'T WORRY your chance will come.
6. Prepare yourself for the worst.
7. Obtain as many brownie points while you're still cute.
8. Stay away from senior guys - OR ELSE!
9. Save all absences for a worthwhile trip to Hampton.
10. No matter what you do - DON'T BE TARDY!!!

GOOD LUCK - YOU'LL NEED IT!!!

EUROPEAN TERRESTRIALS

We had three visitors from Europe this year-- Maria Laaksonen from Finland, Mats Kjelbye from Sweden, and Maik Skowronski from West Germany. After getting used to American differences such as skyscrapers, big cars, and billboards, these people fit right into the flow of daily activities such as choir, sports, and clubs, especially the new International Club.

Each student found that he or she was prepared for this overseas visit. Mats said that he had studied American culture so he knew what hamburgers were. In addition to two 4-week trips to England, Maik had the help and suggestions of his brother Jan, who visited S.H.S. three years ago.

Maria said that her visit here has included a lot of homework, while Maik has been participating in a lot of sports. "In Germany, there is usually just gym." Mats described his visit as a "pleasant coma."

Though they'll be going home soon, each wanted to leave certain impressions of themselves and bring certain things back with them to Europe. Maria, who wanted to be remembered for her "blond hair and shy little smile, wished to take Halloween and peanut butter sandwiches back to Finland. Mats hoped people would remember his "cute, irresistible smile," and wanted to see soup crackers in Sweden. Maik wanted to leave "any good impression," and hoped that West Germany would become "more organized with sports and extra-curricular activities."

Mats Kjelbye was prepared for the "hamburger culture."

The computer and special ed. departments worked in cooperation on a new program, Classroom of the Future. Three key parts of the program were teachers, a relaxed but structured learning environment, and the role of computers. Using a computer, students didn't get bogged down with handwriting, spelling, or calculations: they could move directly to important learning tasks.

New Kid On The Block

..... September 2, 1987

Beginning in the late summer of 1987, the school had a new headmaster named Ray Peterson. He received his doctorate in Administration and Government from Harvard University. He wasn't new at responsibility, having the experience of an Air Force pilot behind him, nor was he new at running a high school, being a former principal of Lunenburg High. Dr. Peterson showed a great deal of interest in the workings of Shrewsbury High, especially concerning tardiness to class! Working with teachers and the two housemasters, he truly cracked down on tardies. Although changing no current policies in the 87-88 school year, he hoped to rework some parts of Shrewsbury High's system in the future.

-Is that him? Over there by the four corners?

-Whaa...Where? I can't see ANYBODY. All these eighth graders! Humpf! I can't even BREATHE.

-I see some GUY standing by the I.S.S.P. room. He's really tall, with a shiny head. Could that be him?

-Well YOU'RE the one who saw Dr. Raymonson's picture in the paper?

-Yeah, but I don't have a photographic memory, DUDE. Like d'ya think I remember EXACTLY how he looks? And hey, isn't his name PETER something?

..... -Yeah, yeah, whatever. Is that the guy over there? Is that him?

-Uhhh...no, I don't think so. He's some other new person, Cha...Chaci? No, Chace, Mr. CHACE. Yeah, that's it. He's Mr. Chace, a new psychology teacher.

-Well, I want to see the new HEADMASTER, stupid! Mr. Petersfield.

-Gee, c'mon. Don't get uptight. He's GOTTA be around somewhere. I mean, of COURSE he's gonna show up for the first day of school.

-Hey, I'm sorry. You're right. Hmmm...You know, I heard he's REALLY tough.

-Well, I wouldn't worry about it. We only have to take ONE year of him, anyway.

Dr. Peterson's shades reinforce his cool, collected personality.

-D'ya think that's him over there, chatting with Monty?

-Yup. That MUST be him, the famous Dr. RAY PETERSON!

Because Children Deserve The Best

Dr. Stephen Mills was elected to the Worcester School Committee in November of 1987. Why? "Because Children Deserve the Best," according to his campaign slogan. Dr. Mills, an adjustment counselor, had for some time considered running for the school committee. He is a person who is "very involved with the community." Said he "I felt it was something I had to do. Why does Mr. Hodgen write poetry, why does Bruce Jenner run marathons? Each simply feels it's something they have to do."

Dr. Mills definitely felt there was a lot to do about Worcester's public schools, which were in poor physical condition and terribly overcrowded. Students were lacking critical thinking skills and sex education. It was Dr. Mills' idea that if one is going to get angry about something, he shouldn't just complain-- he should get involved. And that is just what he did, knocking on 7,000 doors in Worcester and talking with constituents. Dr. Mills, a flamboyant person, explained that he believed in himself, and obviously, so did the people of Worcester. His election to public office in Worcester, the second largest city in New England, was truly a colossal feat, especially with his plurality of votes. Dr. Mills looked forward to starting his term in January of '88, and giving the students of Worcester his BEST.

Dr. Mills' Faculty Advisory Council Minutes

Excerpts from October 19, 1987

2. The F.A.C. suggestion box is alive and well... Speaking of communication, Dr. Peterson reiterated what should be standard operating procedure. Speak to the person directly involved and follow it with a written memo. If you are not satisfied, move up the ladder until you are. The ladder includes but is not limited to the following rungs: department director, housemaster, headmaster, superintendent, school committee, town selectman, Department of Education, State Legislature, Michael Dukakis, George Steinbrenner, Ronald Reagan, Buddha, Jesus Christ, Ted Kennedy, and God. If you've gotten to this point with no satisfaction, gossip as much as you can behind the other person's back.

9. There was a discussion about leaky gas in the science department. I was suspecting Cornacchioli until it became clear we were talking about natural gas from the gas jets.

Excerpts from November 19, 1987

1. For the 347th time in four years, we discussed homeroom period. Now, some folks are upset because it is taking their prep period. For the record, we have tried it before school, after school, after first period, rotating the period, rotating the day, not at all, everyday, every so often, occasionally, and rarely. We've even changed the name - activity period. This issue involves every faction in the school. We concluded (again) that no option pleases everyone all the time and some options don't please anybody any of the time. Considering all of the above, Ray Peterson will do whatever he . . . pleases and that will be as effective as anything else.

P.S. "If nominated, I will not run, and if elected, I will not serve." Lyndon Johnson, March, 1968. Joe Biden, August, 1987.

Sherry Alarie
Full Time Sub.

If you needed someone to fill in for your class who would you depend on? One choice would have been Mrs. Sherrie Alarie, a full time substitute. This position was created in the belief that a substitute who is at the school everyday and becomes an immediate teacher in a variety of subjects deserves the salary of a contract teacher, with all the regular benefits.

Mrs. Alarie earned her Bachelor of Education with a concentration in French. In the 87-88 year she taught her own French class along with substituting. She also decided to work towards major certification in high school level math. Her only regret about substitute teaching was that with all of the switching from class to class, it was hard to form lasting relationships with students.

ARTS feature

"That which we call a rose, by any other name would smell as sweet." William Shakespeare.

What's in a name? Well, for one thing, there can be a lot of confusion. Though there really was only one new art teacher this year, Michael Smith, it seemed as though there may have been two - who was this new person Miss Welch?

Jo Schmoe entered the art room. Hmmm..., what would this new art teacher look like? And would she be nice? "Gee," he wondered, "I thought I would have Mrs. Poole this year. I was really looking forward to it." Was Joe Schmoe surprised to see Mrs.
Poole behind her familiar desk! Only the name had changed. Miss Welch was our favorite Mrs. Poole!

The art department had a great year. An art club was started, and it truly was a success, advised by Michael Smith. The entire faculty trio, newcomer Tom Smith, "our own" Joe Deignan, and sophisticated Pat Welch, had a great year.

No Horsing Around!

Horses on the grounds of S.H.S.? Could it be true? With the high school's new eighth grade teacher, MaryAnn Abraham, anything was possible. In the fall of '87, as part of an English classroom study on horses, she decided to bring in "the real thing." That special day came when two hoofed, four-legged creatures were brought to the school's front yard. Students fed apples to these equestrian animals, or just gave them a friendly pat. The more daring mounted a horse and took a ride.

Miss Abraham has long been famous for her teaching enthusiasm. Before coming to the high school, she taught at Coolidge, Spring Street, and the Middle School. Said she about her new job, "I feel I have the excitement and energy of a first year teacher with 16 years of experience behind me."

MAINTENANCE

Long Drives, Long Career

Twenty one years ago, Mrs. Madelyn O'Brien began looking for a job close to home. She had just finished work as vice-president of Marshall Advertising and Murphy Town Liquors, when her father retired as president of the businesses. In that year of 1966 she decided to work at the town hall, directly across the street from her home. Each day she drove her car to work in the morning, home for lunch, to work again, and back home at the end of her day. She bought a new car every three years to withstand these long drives to and fro.

Mrs. O'Brien climbed her way up the ladder at the town hall, working for four superintendents. She became deeply involved with her work. As her daughter described, "She has to be going 28 hours a day." Retiring in 1987, Mrs. O'Brien will now find more time for her two grandchildren, Ryan and Shannon, and will pursue her interest in travel.

Wouldn't it be easier if we didn't have to study?

Everyday, when the bell rang at 2:00 signaling dismissal, we clustered about our blue and gold painted lockers screaming to one another, "What do I have for homework?" "Does Miss Hubbard want us to read Chaucer tonight?" "When is my physics lab due?" Then we lugged our pile of books home and tried to fit in study time during the commercial breaks while we watched Alf. Finding time to study along with all our other activities was not always easy and the question "Wouldn't it be easier if we didn't have to study?" almost always crossed our minds.

Our curriculum offered a diverse course selection that fit all of our needs. We could all develop special interests by experimenting with different subjects. Electives ranged from Bio-ethics to Mechanical Drawing. In the fall of 1987 we had to dodge the mothers and fathers of the "egg babies," as they maneuvered through the halls trying not to crack their pride and joy. This experiment in parenthood was part of the curriculum for the new Childhood Development class.

Whatever the subject, the dedicated faculty made studying both fun and interesting for us.

Making the grade

"Why did you give me a C?"

You've all heard of Black Monday and the Stock Market crash, but how about Black Wednesday or Friday? Better known as THE DAY REPORT CARDS WERE ISSUED! As Kathy Minnucci commented, "Report cards ALWAYS go out the day before a vacation, so you have to prepare your parents well in advance."

These are probably the worst days of the year for most students, and the mood of the entire school changes from frivolity to depression. When the announcement came over the P.A., "All students will now return to homeroom", the expression on most faces was so serious that an outsider might think the kids were about to receive death sentences. Unfortunately for some, they were being handed the equivalent, for they knew that when their parents saw their marks they would not see the outside world until the next issuance of grades. However, not all went through this agony; for some, this day was one of sheer joy, because their grades reflected their effort and work, and would result in accolades, as well as gifts by their families. Teachers too usually despaired on this day, for they knew that they would hear that familiar question, "How come you only gave me a C?"

"Oh no, the only way I can handle looking at this report card is lying down." - Scott Maynard

Cracking SAT's

Students prepared for aptitude tests

S.A.T. These three letters were enough to send a chill down the spine of any senior. Our whole life (actually just our acceptance to a college) was affected by those scores.

In recent years, the teachers at Shrewsbury High School developed programs to help students prepare for the SAT's. Starting with "601 Words for the SAT's" during sophomore year, the vocabulary studied in English classes was primarily geared toward SAT's. Over the summer, a class taught by Mrs. Stevens on preparation for the SAT's was offered as a part of the summer school program. In 1987, books on the SAT's, such as The Princeton Review's "Cracking the System", were used in junior and senior English classes. Also, Mrs. Glenda Wolpert offered her time and assistance in administering practice tests to interested students on Thursday afternoons. Mrs. Wolpert covered only the verbal portion of the SAT, discussing time saving methods and test taking strategies. "And the only way you can use those strategies is to practice them," she said.

The first SAT's of the school year were administered on November 7th. Did any of this preparation help? Senior Jenn Kerr, who participated in the practice sessions, said she felt less nervous and knew what to expect. However, only the scores would show how we really did.

Let's dance

Expressing creativity

Soft, soothing music played as the circle of cool white light illuminated the solitary figure upon the dark stage. The dancer came to life with flowing movements, arms reaching, legs stretching, torso bending, neck extending. Expressing deep emotion with every spherical turn, it was a body immersed in pulsing modern rhythm.

Modern dance performed by Abby Crain.

A screen above and behind the dancer's silhouette burst into action with images of sweating workouts and careful choreography, documenting the many hours of work that a few moments on stage demanded.

Abigail Crain's modern dance performance was just one of the many events which students performed for Expression '88. Other dancers were Angie Durocher and Craig Spence. Julie Baker demonstrated her finesse on the violin, and students like Lauren Fournier utilized their dramatic talents acting out excerpts from plays.

Wednesday, March 23, 1988, was the big day, marking the acme of the English Departments Spring Writing Week. Mrs. LaBelle and Mr. Robbins organized the event with the cooperation of the Music, Art, and Video departments, and, of course, the students.

Hockey craze

Off-campus students learned through sports

The slap of hockey sticks and the slam of the ball against the wall were heard as the latest craze, floor hockey, took over at the Off-Campus program located in the Beal School building.

The players, including all students and staff members, were divided into two fast-running, competitive yet friendly teams.

One team included Tami Baker whose presence was known through her frequent, loud screams during the games; Bill Albert, the rookie goalie, whose defense only improved with every game; Marc Pulster, the "clumper", so named because of his heavy work boots; and Ann Gustafson, the "ringer", who has played some form of hockey since her college days.

The other team boasted Greg Benoit, an experienced player possessing an excellent slap shot; Tom Belsito, who has frequently demonstrated a willingness to sacrifice his body for the game; George St.Demis, a good but infrequent player; Natalie Fraser, who overcame her initial reluctance to play and whose children would be shocked watching her; and Ellen LeShay who, due to her 'quick' reflexes, consistently managed to be injured. Two new students, Theresa Ferraro and Eddie Temple also would be recruited to play for Off-Campus but were not yet assigned to a team.

When not playing hockey, Off-Campus students were likely to be found intently studying social studies, math, English, or health.

A.P. courses offered challenge

Ughh! Those two formidable initials...A.P.! What did they mean, who did they involve, why were they there on that course sign-up sheet? A.P. meant Advanced Placement, and that meant highly competitive classes for academically inclined students who would challenge themselves on the college level. Whether they endeavored to take Modern European History, American History, World Literature, or Calculus, those teens emerged themselves into a world of thought provoking lectures, confusing books, long hours of weary-eyed studying, and mind-boggling examinations. There was no time to be bored in these classes. They were preparing themselves for the Advanced Placement tests which would be given in the spring, and which might give them college credit depending upon their scores.

Dr. Anne C. Murphy took on the incredible task of teaching the two A.P. History courses, Modern European and American. All her students can remember how exhausted she was after correcting two sets of book critiques and three piles of essay tests.

Going back to a typical day in her classroom, we saw a slightly-built red-headed woman standing in front of her class with a piece of chalk in her hand. But wait, it's not an ordinary piece of chalk, why, it's a microphone. Yes, Dr. Murphy has been transformed into a folk singer, and she's bursting out into song with a musical version of the Declaration of Independence, "When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary..."

Keeping up:

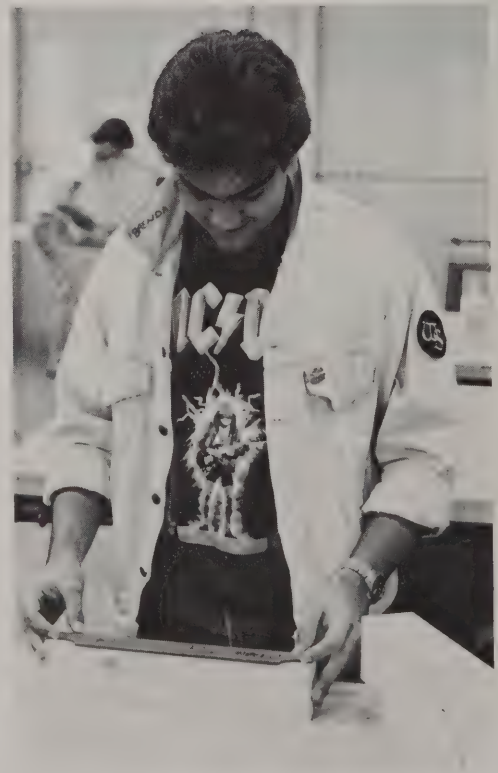

Technological drafters used computers

Computers have entered into almost every aspect of life. In school we saw them in every class from English to Algebra, and now in Industrial Arts.

The I.A. Department used five computers to teach students in Technical and Architectural drawing, and drafting.

Computer learning was helpful because it allowed kids with less motor control and ability to create complicated projects. It was especially successful with learning disabilities. Unfortunately, with the expense of computers, and the increased number of student interest in this area, some students were unable to get involved in these programs.

"There has to be a good balance between computer work and actual board work," said Mr. MacMillan, "Keeping up with technology is very important." The computer allowed the students to avoid some of the tedious work that went into technical drawing. In the future, the Industrial Arts Department would like to expand their computer projects so that all the students can benefit from computer technology.

Business Law

Order in the classroom

Order in the classroom! As another Business Law class began, Mr. Ralph M. Zona asked his students to take their seats. Mr. Zona then told the class to open their books to the page where they had left off in the previous class. Senior Brian Keeley read aloud, and at certain intervals Mr. Zona interrupted the student to give an example or to tell a story. This particular chapter dealt with the law and the individual. Mr. Zona told of personal experiences of past years' students with the police in Shrewsbury. Because this was a subject which many of the students found interesting, they asked questions of Mr. Zona concerning their legal rights. Before the bell rang, Mr. Zona collected permission slips for his annual field trip to New York City. Senior, Mike Little, who has been nicknamed by Mr. Zona as 'Mike Big', asked about the possibility of the class going to the Worcester County Courtroom. Kalli McCullough later commented on the silly nicknames Mr. Zona gives to everyone. "He calls Caryn Figueras 'Figuerina' and Kathy Minnucci "Mini-Minnucci." But, on a more serious note, she added, "I never knew law could be so interesting." No matter what the future held, one thing was certain, a boring moment would never find its way into business law.

Mr. Zona, what a guy!

$72,000 richer

Grants meant excitement in computer room

"Holy hi-tech research skills, FATMAN! Where did all these computers come from? Wait a minute! Holy major computer appearance! Was the FOOLER on a computer craze, or what?"

"No, REUBAN, don't be silly. These computers were added to the department after it received grants from a number of benefactors."

"Gee whiz, FATMAN! How much cash did they get?"

"C'mon REUBAN, don't be crass. If you must know, according to the the FATMAN-fund allocation resource information terminal, they received approximately $72,000 in the past three years."

"Holy wealth-the-size-of-an-Arabian-oil-man, FATMAN! Who were the sources for these generous grants?"

"I'd be happy to give the credit for these funds, REUBAN. The Massachusetts Department of Education allotted a whopping sum of $30,000; Wang Computers donated $18,000 to the business department; and Apple Computers gave $25,000 to the Special Education Classroom of the Future."

"Gosh FATMAN! Did they really need all that money? I mean, how could one school use all those funds? Just for computers, too!"

"Well REUBAN, there can never be enough money when it comes to education. But basically, the capital goes towards the purchase of software, hardware, equipment, and the development of teachers' curriculum. I consulted Mr. Thomas Plati, Computer Department Director, and he said that by June of 1988 just about everybody in the school will have used a part of one of these grants."

Extra, extra!

Read all about it: Town Crier's on sale

“Anybody want to buy a Town Crier? Only 25 cents! For a limited time only. Town Crier's for sale! Please buy one, please. I haven't made a sale all day. ”

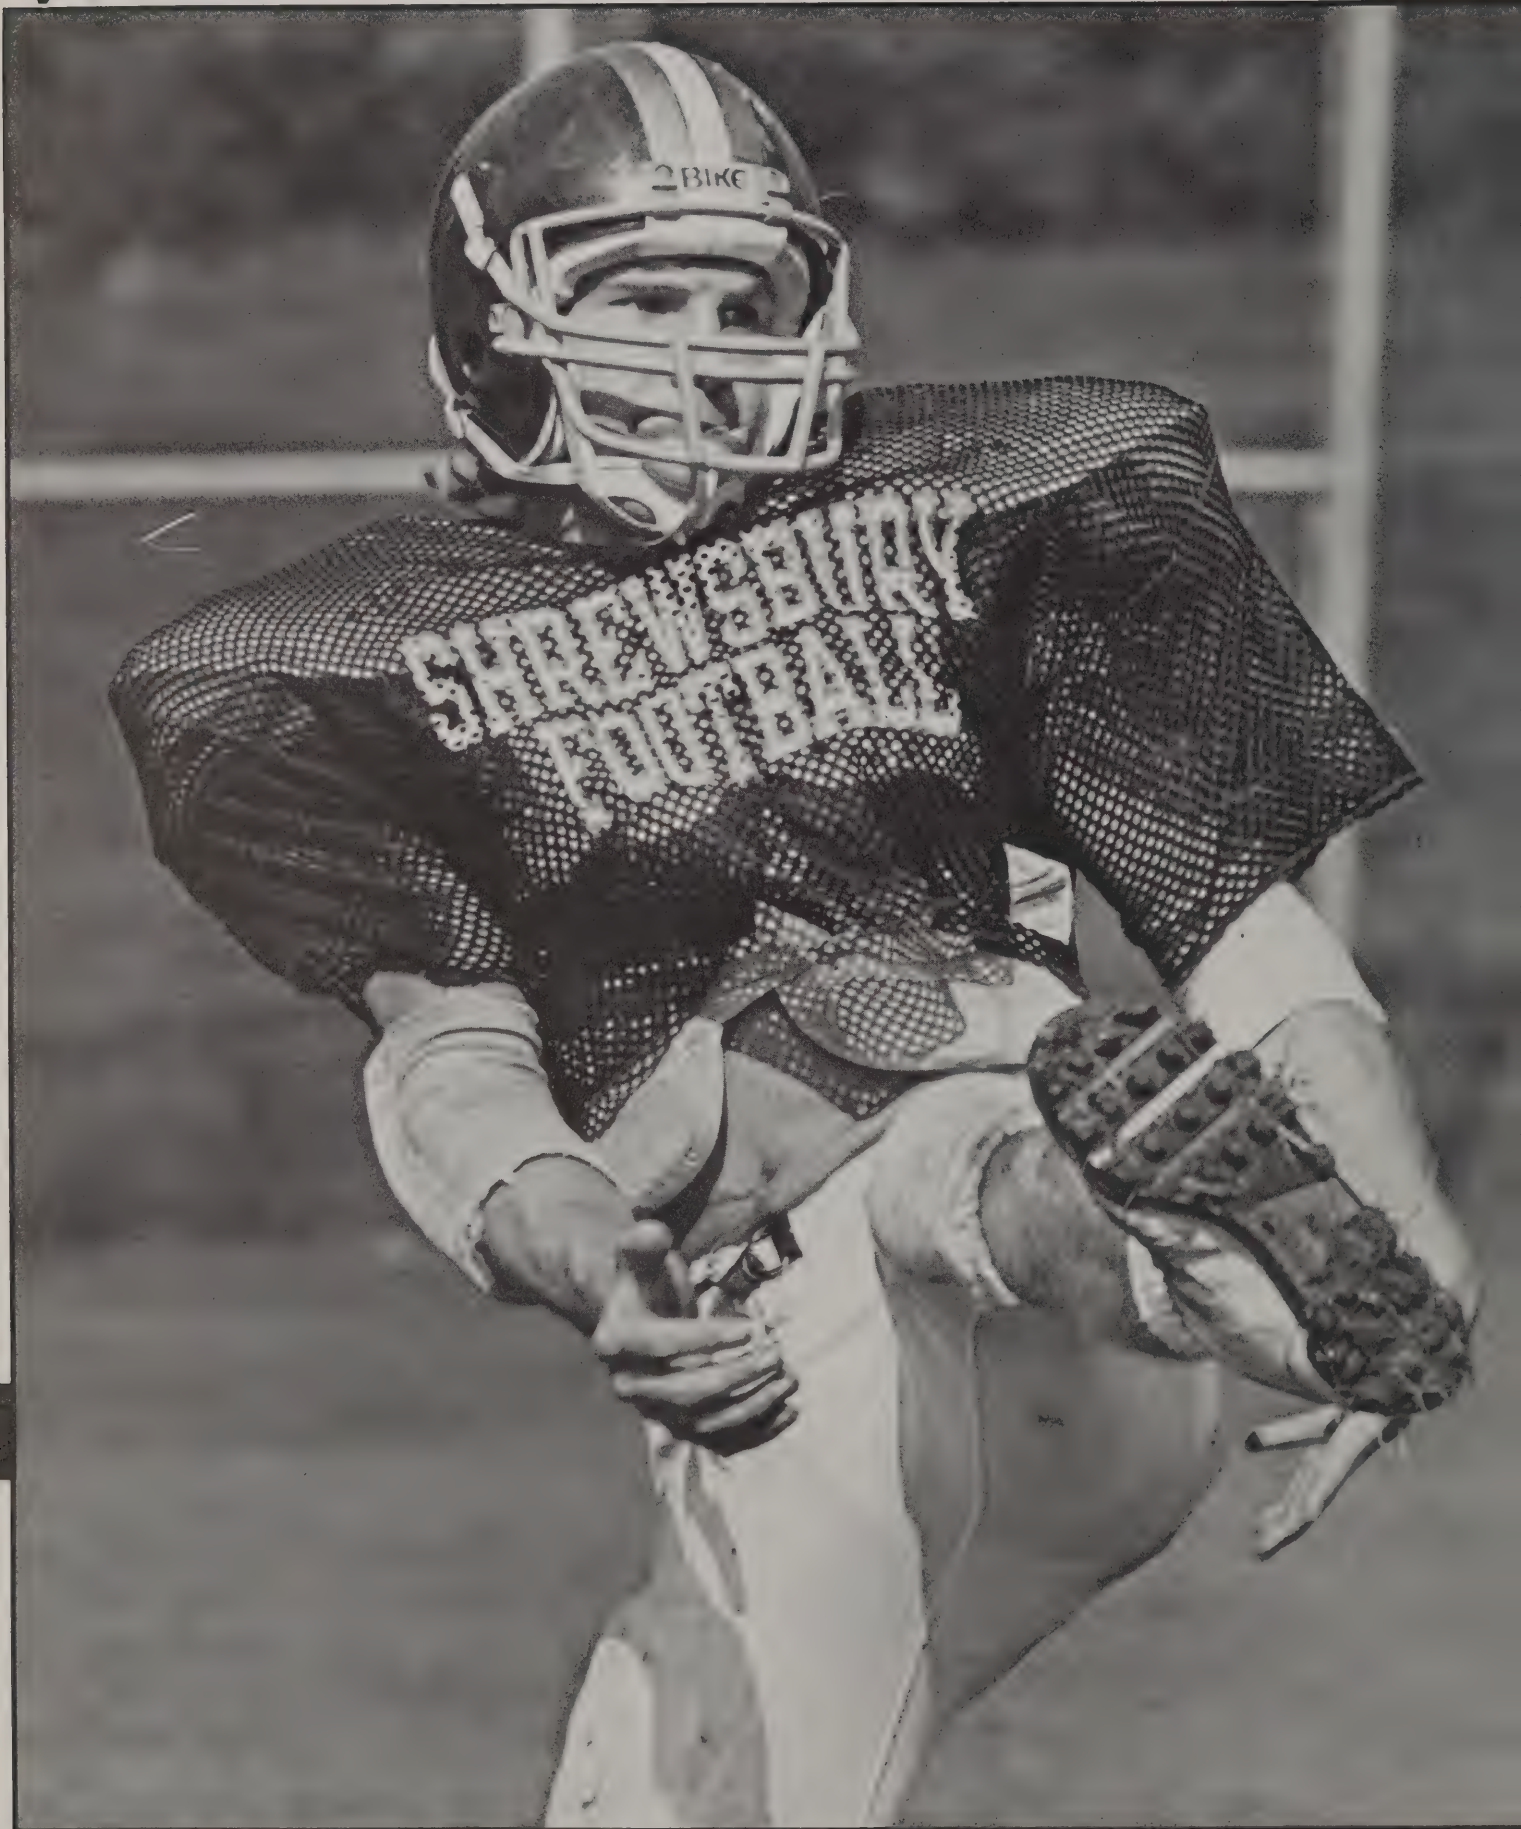

One day while I ate my delightful baconburger, this announcement was meekly cried through the noise of the cafeteria. I stopped in mid-bite and wondered, “What is the Town Crier?” I looked around to see what was going on and there I saw a skinny girl standing in the middle of the cafeteria, looking pathetic, with a pile of papers stacked up to her chin. I asked my lunchmates what she was selling, and they gave me a variety of answers. “I dunno;” “Who cares;” “Pickles, maybe;” “Gown dyer, or something like that.” I decided to find out for myself, and asked someone to lend me a quarter, since I only had fifteen cents in change left over from the dollar I'd spent on a Type A Student lunch. Walking over to the girl, I saw that anxiety filled her eyes as she spotted me. I gave her the coin and she handed me a Town Crier. I returned to my table to leaf through the journal, and it dawned on me that this thing was the official school newspaper. I put it aside so I could finish my lunch, and somehow it ended up at another table. I retrieved my copy at the end of the period, but didn't have time to look at it before my next class.

That night at home I found the paper stuffed inside of my note book. I picked it up and was about to toss it in the trash when an article about Coca Cola and apartheid in Africa caught my eye. I then moved on to read about my favorite group, The Smiths. Before I knew it I'd read through the entire paper. “Hmmm...,” I thought, “not bad at all, and looks computerized too. What a cool way to print a paper.”

Wouldn't it be easier if our practices were shorter?

Every athlete knew the feeling of complete exhaustion. Hot and sweaty, aching and sore, muscles crying out in pain, it often seemed as though practice would never end. Coaches would drill us until we dropped. But it paid off when we won.

Working together to win, with spirit and confidence tucked under our belts, we proved that a positive attitude could bring victory to all of us. Even if the score showed a loss, we developed a better sense of sportsmanship with every challenge. Being part of a team was exciting and rewarding, but only if the members invested time and effort. It might have been easier if practices weren't so long and grueling, but hard work paid off in the end.

POWDER PUFF

Girls playing football? Boys cheerleading? Yes, it did happen, after all it was the 80's. The Senior women challenged the junior girls on Oct. 24, 1987 to a "Powderpuff" football game. Senior Heather Cook, with the help of senior Steve Cormier, initiated the idea, and convinced the seniors and juniors to participate. With Jason Holley, Jeff Risk, and Joel Cote coaching the juniors, the senior coaches Steve Cormier and Chris Spellman knew that the competition would be tough. After many weekends of practice and preparation on the grounds of the Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology, the seniors and juniors locked horns. The outcome - seniors 14, juniors 8. Betsy Clark scored the two touchdowns for the seniors.

Not all the fun was experienced by the girls though. Guidance Counselor Jack McGinn, alumni Joe Spellman, and seniors Dave Campaniello and Greg Donnelly refereed the game, and junior cheerleaders Jeff Lawrence, Paul DeMaria, Noel Dupont, and David Greer made their half time show complete with a water and shaving-cream balloon bombing of the seniors. It was great fun for all, from the fans in the stand to the players on the field, and hopefully the powderpuff teams will become a tradition.

SNOW BALLS AND FOOT BALL

Playing football in the snow sounds messy, but it didn't seem to hinder the performance of the Varsity football team in their game against Southbridge. The guys were on a high coming into the November 14th game because of a win over Westboro the previous week. The Colonials had some good times in the snow-- during one practice Shawn Dwyer was pegged by a snowball and threw a temper tantrum.

Junior Jason Holly made two interceptions against Southbridge, one of which led to a touchdown for the Colonials. David Campaniello helped to shut down Southbridge's offense with two blocked passes. It was a big game for junior Keith Taparauskys, who broke the 1000 yard mark for rushing. Our team beat Southbridge 27-0.

The experienced senior line was an important factor in the team's success, which placed them eighth in the MIAA division I rating. "Campy," Derek Moss, Greg Donnelly, Rob Franklin, Brian Radziewicz, Chris Eck, and Tom O'Connor were all invaluable players. And of course, who could forget the new senior addition of Ashby Richardson, who after three years of soccer joined football to kick one for two in field goals and complete many extra points.

LOSING THE BALL

"The snap went over the punter's head! Oh no, we lost the ball." This allowed Algonquin to drive in and score the first touch down of the game which was followed by a two-point conversion with no time left at the end of the first half. Despite offensive dominance over Algonquin, Shrewsbury couldn't connect to take the game. The second half seemed promising when Paul Mailman ran twenty yards making the score 8-6. With offensive linemen Chuck Falcone, Scott Toth, Kevin Cormier, Shawn Keeler, and Shawn Alarie, it appeared inevitable that we would win if we could just get one field goal or another touchdown. But the final score was in Algonquin's favor at 8-6.

Although disappointed with the losses to Algonquin and St. John's, the players never lost the agility and talent which made them a winning team.

GIRLS SET HIGH GOALS

It was just a few minutes before the game was about to begin. The referees were ready on the field and the teams were in their huddles. "One, two, three, four what do you think these legs are for? Score! Score! Score!" cheered the psyched players of the Girls Varsity Soccer Team, so it echoed off the bleachers and the school.

Throughout the season, the team held an air of confidence and aggressiveness despite its minor problems such as the "Senior Curse." During the season all of the Seniors, Betsy Cowles, Caryn Figueras, Crissy Lucchese, Erin McCann, and MaryLynne "Bunchie" Moynihan, were injured at least once. While the Seniors recuperated, the younger players handled the job. Juniors, Tracy Aro, Angie Durocher, and Mel Gregory along with underclassmen, Andrea Principe, Jenny Threatt, and Holly Shaughnessy responded well to the vocal coaching comments of Jeff Robbins. The Girls played well and finished their season with a positive kick!

WORD GOT OUT

"Just get the word out that if they are not ready by tryouts, they'll never be ready," Coach Manzello told Co-Captains Noel Christopher and Mike Gradilone.

Word got out. Players started to train well in advance of tryouts. All talk was of how the new coach was going to turn the soccer program around single-handedly. And as the players would soon learn, he was going to "do it right." The team's only difficulties were trying to understand Coach Manzello's playing style and new player, Maik Skowronski's English, disguised by a heavy German accent.

The underclassmen provided the team with strong field play. Andy Ryall led in goals scored while Graham Griffith, Mike Grillo, and Darren Ratcliffe had their share of scoring, also. The midfield was supported by Dave Emerson, Greg Capone, and Jeff Moreland. Defensively, the team held strong with the Captains and outstanding play by Billy Donahue and Tri Tran. The net was protected by Mike Finnerty and freshman Paul Hebbardt.

Although falling short of Districts this year, the team eagerly anticipates next season along with the return of 11 Senior players.

GUTS AND GLORY

"No guts, no glory" was an appropriate motto for the 1987 Girls' Cross Country team. The miles and miles of training really paid off this year. For the first time ever, Shrewsbury conquered their arch running rival, Nashoba, in the season's final dual meet. Along with this spirit-raising win, Shrewsbury over-ran Wachusett to prove that determination and commitment truly lead to success.

This was a supprisingly sweet year for a young team with the only Senior being Captain Terri LaCoursiere. One of the key contributors to this year's 10 and 1 record was Sophomore Martha Fairbanks who overcame an injury to defend her first place position in the District E Cross Country Championship. This season, the best ever, was truly exciting for all involved.

THE GUN SOUNDS

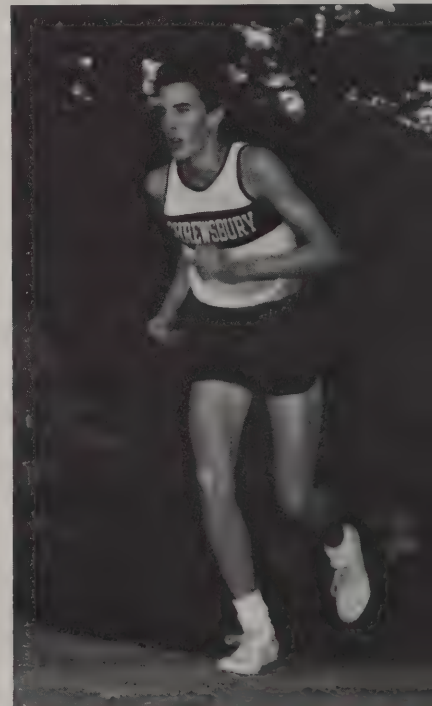

"The gun sounds and just as in all meets Junior Steve "Spike Goose" Senosk takes the lead. Seniors Tom Graves and Captain Ed Pescaro are close behind. Freshman sensation Mark Livingston and Junior "Jumpin" Jason Feeney make their usual slow starts, but never fear - they will catch up to and, in most cases, overtake the pack that is chasing Senosk. Senior Jim "Computer Room" Girard, Freshman "Jack" Freeman, Juniors T.F. Doyle and Todd Bulok, and Sophomore Dan Driscoll round out the Colonial Varsity team."

Unfortunately the boys' season highlights did not include beating two long standing rivals, St. John's and Marlboro. Instead, the course record broken by Ed Pescaro at Maynard and the school record broken by Steve Senosk took the spotlight. The team looks strong for the future and should expect many successful years ahead.

HEY, COACH?

"Bring-a-ling-a-ling. Brrring."

"Hello?"

"Hi Lynne, it's me, Jen."

"Oh, how ya doin'? Hey, have you heard any news about a coach?"

"No, and our first game's in less than three weeks. What are we gonna do?"

"Well, Mr. Kleminich promised us he'd try to find one. If not I guess we'll have to make it on our own."

Luckily, the field hockey team did find a coach, but just in the nick of time. In fact, tryouts didn't start until the first week of school. Coach Pam Krause was already a familiar face at the high school, leading the ski club and crew teams. But she was the second new coach the field hockey team had had in two years, and that would mean another fall season of change and adjustment. Mrs. Krause stressed the importance of dribbling and passing skills, and reminded the girls that team communication could get them through the toughest game.

Outstanding players on the offense were senior Jen Flaherty, and juniors Kathy Keville, Pam Santora, and Becky Rogers. On the midline, senior Christine Jose gave a tremendous effort backing up the offense, with valuable help from captains Lynne Scannell and Karen Rawson. And when it came down to the bottom line, with the ball at the Colonial's end, goalie Trina Bourget, a junior, did an excellent job in the cage.

SUMMER PRACTICE PAYS

In a season clouded with rumors of increasing violence in high school hockey, the Colonials continued to establish their reputation as a Central Massachusetts powerhouse. A new schedule, including St. Johns, St. Peter-Marion, and various northern teams, namely Leominster and Westford Academy, quieted many disbelievers who once complained of the Colonial icers' "easy schedule."

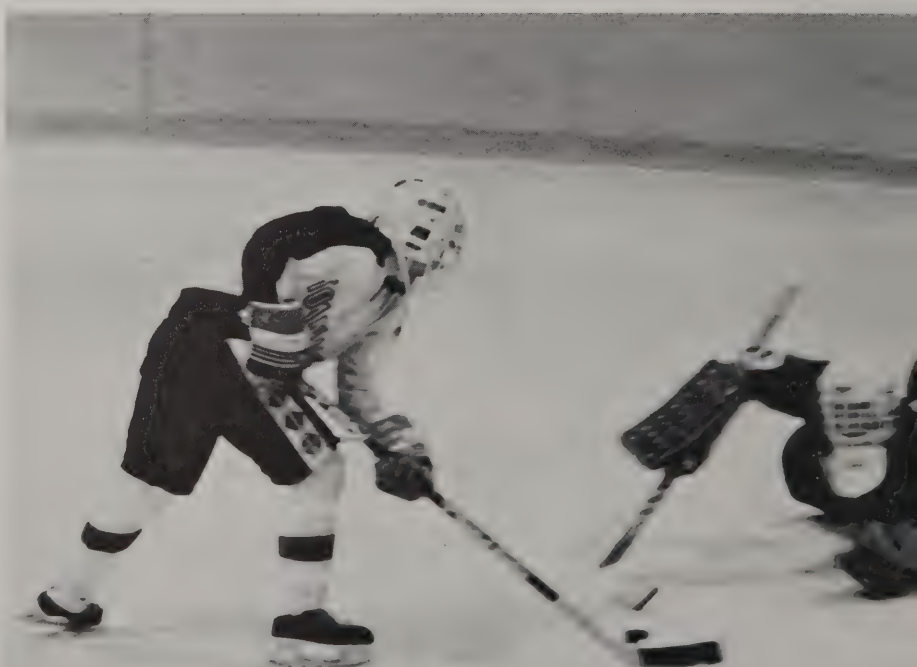

The hockey team began preparing early this summer for their long, exciting winter season. Goalie Michael Cox continued to gain praise for his outstanding play in both the Europe Cup league and, more importantly, the prestigious Hockey Night In Boston (HNIB) tournament. For others, dedication began early with Beaver Brook Street Hockey and countless games of roller hockey in the summer heat. Seniors Ashby Richardson, Eric Bryan, Michael Bowles, Kevin Lemay, Scott Joslyn, and junior Matthew Daly became familiar with the often violent (EMHDL) Eastern Massachusetts Hockey Development League and its home off Speen Street in Natick.

Seniors John Duquette, Thomas Cardosi, and Scott Joslyn devoted many summer evenings to participate in the HNIB Tryout Camp by travelling to Stoneham to compete against some of the top competition in New England.

The team's three solid forward lines were 1) John Duquette, Thomas Cardosi, Scott Joslyn; 2) Matthew Daly, Eric Bryan, Daniel Moroney; and 3) the Red Wing-like forechecking prowess of Ashby Richardson, Freshman George Breen, and Sean Connolly. The defense, especially Mike Bowles, Kevin Lemay, Jeffrey Tagman, Robert Horne, Christopher Tibbetts, and Ted Gulledge, also helped the super season.

"It's a real plus to have been playing with the same people for so long, because we know each others' tendencies," says Captain Jennifer Kerr, "Everything seems to click." That click was just what it took for Shrewsbury to challenge long-time rivals Marlboro and Milford. After a slow start at the beginning of the season, the team looked to Kelly Esposito's fine skill and the rebounding ability of sophomore Brenda Milley to put the Girls' Varsity close to the top of the Midland League.

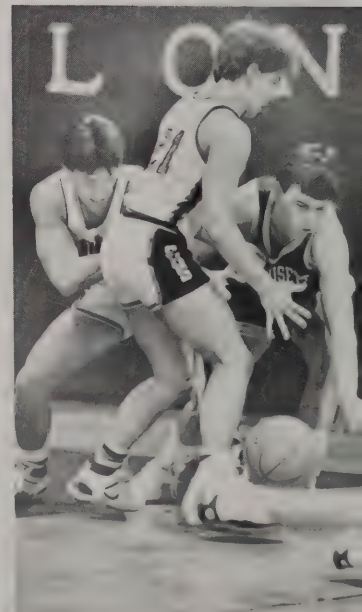

A major key to the Girls' Varsity Basketball Team's success this season was the experience of Michelle Brisson, Chris Jose, Jennifer Kerr, and Nicole Martocci, who have played basketball since they were eighth graders at Shrewsbury High.

According to Coach Ken Largess, "The four seniors are very special to me because they've been associated with the team since I became coach. I've enjoyed coaching them very much, but it is their friendship and loyalty I'll remember long after their basketball achievements."

NEW THREE POINT RULE

It's difficult to bounce back after a loss, but a loss combined with an all out team brawl is nearly impossible to recover from in one day. The Boys' Varsity Basketball team accomplished this feat. After a 75-54 disappointing loss to Marlboro, the Colonials triumphed over the Algonquin Tomahawks the very next day. Seniors Derek Moss, Gregory Senosk, and Jeffrey Gouley led this year's team to a good season. The induction of the 3 point rule reaped great benefits for veterans like Greg Senosk, Jeff Gouley, and Colin Connolly. Junior Steven Senosk, Greg's younger brother, had also taken full advantage of the new ruling. These three-point shooters kept early losses to Fitchburg and Wachusett close games; and helped the team defeat Algonquin, their league rival. The inside play was handled by sophomore standout Jay Szymanski and senior bruiser Derek Moss. The Colonials defense was led by juniors Jeffrey Angel and hard-nosed (or sometimes broken-nosed) Erik Nelson. The strong bench play by Thomas O'Connor, David Greer, and Bryan Miller kept the future looking bright.

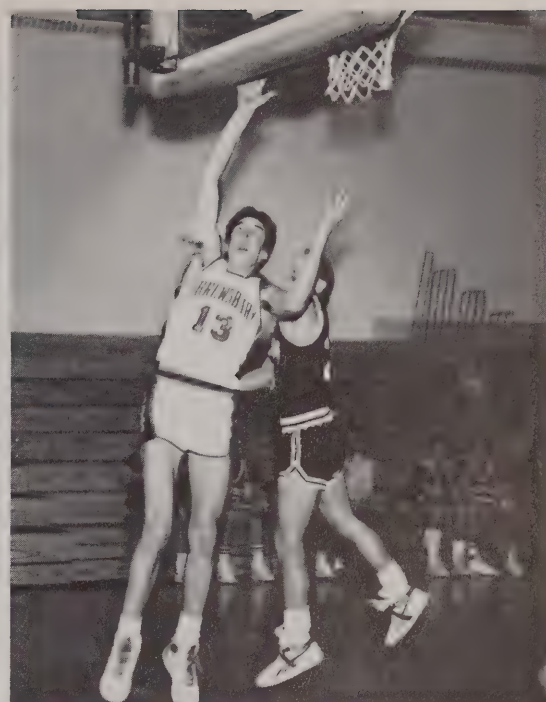

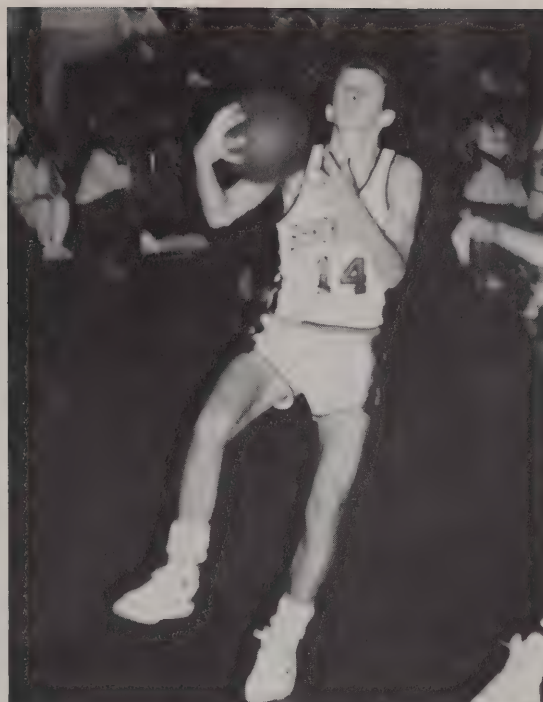

The JV Basketball players will make strong contributions to next year's varsity team. This year's JV team played at a level that was above average in the Midland League. Coach Jim Ryan did a great job with juniors Paul Demaria, Patrick McGlone, Andrew Ryall, Michael Finnerty, David Emerson, Jeffrey Moreland, Terry Condon, and Grahame Griffith. The sophomores Matthew George, Daniel Driscoll, Thomas Bilecki, Jaret Christopher, and William Duke rounded out the team. With this bunch, the future looks bright for Shrewsbury basketball.

TOUGH BREAKS ALL YEAR

"We need a coach!" This was the cry heard from the gymnastics team in the early weeks of November. Signups were complete. The numbers were small, but the team had yet to find a coach. The team's previous coach Miss Niech was taking a leave of absence. There was even talk of canceling the team, but thanks to the efforts of Mr. Ken Engstrand and Miss Rosemary Gaye, the gymnastics team was able to twist and tumble for another season.

Once the obstacle of finding a coach was tackled, the team still had to overcome the continuous injuries and illnesses which occurred. Seniors Cheryl Fearn and eighth grader Jennifer Roy both paid visits to the emergency room at Memorial Hospital due to serious sprained ankles. Cheryl was to be out for over two weeks, and Jen for the remainder of the season. Junior Angelique Durocher was only able to compete in two meets before she was afflicted with a cold which developed into mononucleosis. Angie was also to be out for the season. Toward the end of the season, Freshman Natalie Jen also became ill. She was restricted during meets for the last month of the season.

Regardless of the major setbacks as well as a few minor ones, the gymnastics team was a success. Team spirit and camaraderie was the factor which pulled the team through yet another season of tumbling, leaping, and twisting.

200 WIN RECORD SET

The 1988 Girls' Indoor Track Team accomplished an amazing feat. On January 16th, Nick Dipilato coached his 200th consecutive dual meet win. This long standing winning streak came not by luck, but by the continuous hard work and dedication of Coach Dipilato, his assistants, and the athletes. The 1988 track team led by seniors Betsy Clark, Betsy Cowles, Caryn Figueras, Terri LaCoursiere, Crissy Lucchese, and Paulette Richard continued this tradition of excellence.

During the season many of the younger girls were called upon to fill key spots on the team. Freshman Jessica Aro was left to cover the number one position in the 50 yard dash when captain Crissy Lucchese injured her knee. Freshman Melanie Powers and eighth grader Paulina Zolotarevsky contributed their share in the distance races. These tough, young runners pulled through to help the team continue its string of victories.

Along with the team record came two personal records. Senior Co-Captain Caryn Figueras set the 4k shot-put record with a toss of 40'9 1/4" and the hurdle records in the 45 and 50, with times of 6.5 and 7.0 seconds respectively.

A new ruling this year allowed several underclassmen and veteran Terri LaCoursiere to run two distance events in a single meet. Terri accomplished a difficult back to back two mile-one mile double consisting of over 40 laps.

A welcome addition to this year's team was the assistant coaching of former Shrewsbury track star Martha White. She was one of several of Mr. Dipilato's athletes who have returned to coach with him.

ACTION PACKED SEASON

The boys indoor track team, coached by Nick Dipilato, tasted the sweetness of victory in several close meets during the winter season. Wachusett provided one of these. Wachusett turned out to be tougher competition than originally expected. Two of their top athletes - a high jumper and a 600 runner - returned from injuries for their meet against Shrewsbury. Shrewsbury took an early lead scoring points in the hurdles, but the score teetered back and forth between the two teams. The mile relay would determine the winner. Todd Houle, Mark Livingston, Robert King, and Thomas Graves acarried the relay to victory with a close finish at the line.

The boys' action packed season left them with a 5-1-1 record. Their only loss was to their cross town rivals, St. John's Shrewsbury's strength lay mainly in the sprinting and jumping events. Their four key athletes consisted of Michael Buck, Thomas Graves, Todd Houle, and Craig Spence. The outstanding performances this season gave the boys a shot at a state championship, but back injuries, shoulder injuries, and sprained ankles dimmed their chances. Despite the injuries, two boys broke school records. Todd Houle set the hurdle records in the 45 and 50, with times of 6.4 and 6.0 respectively, and Craig Spence earned himself the 300 yard dash title.

HANG LOOSE

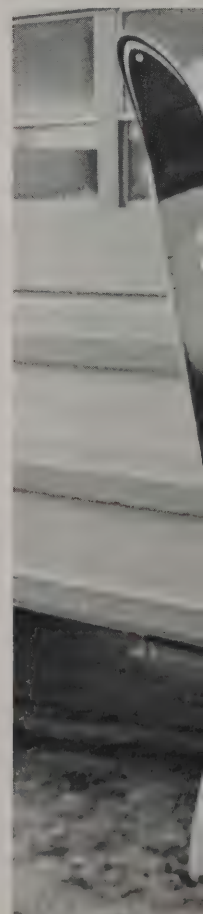

For those sports enthusiasts who weren't up to over-exerting themselves like the jocks, or for those jocks who thought that winter was a great time to take a season off, there were other ways to get involved with athletics. Neither intramural volleyball nor the ski club required the long hours of practice and liters of sweat which varsity sports demanded. Don't be mistaken--volleyball and skiing weren't for wimps. They were simply for the "hang loose" type of athlete, cool and noncommittal. Volleyball could even be played between seasons as a "break" sport.

Ski club was super-popular (101 members!) for a lot of reasons. Number one on the list was six Wednesday afternoon trips to Mount Wachusett, a great way to break up the middle of the week. The 87-88 season brought plenty of snow, but unfortunately a lot of cold came with it. Freezing temperatures did inhibit a little bit of the skiing enjoyment, and a lot of members stuck around in the lodge for the social scene and the warmth. Senior David Hallas said that, besides skiing, the best thing about ski club was the lodge's french fries. Jason Sparling, a freshman, said he liked "being able to make new friends." Friends were sometimes forced upon members when it was three to a seat, with heavy ski jackets and equipment, on a twenty-minute bus ride home from the mountain.

How to sum up the six-week season? Well, there really is no way to put it in words. But members surely will remember the feeling they got when their skis were swishing through the snow, the wind was hitting their faces, and they were flying down the slopes.

FAMILY UNITY

It is true that many sports teams function as large families do; this was particularly true of the 1988 cheerleading squad. One of the primary reasons for the close-knit quality of the squad was the fact that most of the teammates had been cheering with each other for their entire high school career. For example, senior Lisa Colosi and captains Judy Chase and Susan Mattress have been teammates for five years; Amanda Bishop and Donna Shustak, the other two seniors on the squad have been varsity team members for four and three years respectively.

A second reason for the family unity of the squad was the desire for the younger members of the team to carry on the level of dedication that the squad had maintained during the past several years. The junior members of the squad made a notably strong contribution. Leslie Chumsae and Jennifer Carpenter were essential in the team's performances, and Kimberly Notargiacomo was irreplaceable; which made for a positive outlook on the coming year, as well as a sense of loyalty between team members.

Another reason that cheerleaders have continually worked so well together, especially during the '87-'88 school year, was that they worked for a common cause. Because of the demanding practice schedule during the competition season, the team finds itself at the school as early as 7:30 a.m. on Saturdays, staying as late as 1:30 in the afternoon. The pressure was greater in 1988 than any previous year because this varsity squad had to live up to the reputation of "the best team ever to come out of Shrewsbury High School."

One highlight of this year's squad was their appearance in competition at the Centrum before the Harlem Globetrotters on February 20th.

"This competition squad is the best cheering team that has ever come out of Shrewsbury High School; there will never be another squad that attains the excellence that these girls have attained" -

Wouldn't it be easier if we all stayed in tune?

Practice though we did, our songs were often full of wrong notes and rhythms, but these mistakes didn't get us down, and they were far outnumbered by what we played correctly. The same really holds true in life. Even if we aren't always perfect, our successes will easily outshine our out-of-tune moments. Along with an appreciation for the sounds around us, our music classes gave us a sense of discipline to perform well on stage and out in the world.

We spent a great deal of time carting instruments to and from school, and nursing sore throats before a big concert. Yes, it would have been easier if we all stayed in tune, and if being part of a musical group wasn't so time consuming. But then again, it wouldn't have been nearly so much fun.

It was so cold...!

How cold was it?? "It was sooo cold that my lips froze to the mouthpiece of my mellophone (anonymous band member)!" During the 1987 Thanksgiving game, the temperature fell below freezing, but the band bravely persevered and marched on to play the half-time show. Yes, "the show must go on" was a quote many band members must have been thinking as they looked up in the stands to see all of the fans who had come especially to hear them play. Not ones to let an audience down, the student musicians, along with their director Lou Vella, all froze their fingers off while playing Tequilla (yes, the "Pee-Wee Herman Song"), Shake Down (you remember the one by Bob Seger, don't you?), and Hymne, by Vangelis (the same guy who wrote the famous tune Chariots of Fire). Thank goodness that the musicians' giant "Q-tip" hats at least kept the top of their heads warm. The band members gave each song their all, for they knew that waiting for them back at the stands was a jug of hot cocoa and boxes of pastry snacks, provided for them by the Music Association. What a delicious way to enjoy the second half of the game on a chilly day!

With concert season more cold weather came--but the beautiful, joyous sounds which came from the musicians' instruments warmed the auditorium during the holiday concert. It was a night to experience the international flavor of music, as the band played Hava Nagila and Brazilian Sleighbells. There had been little time to get into the "concert mode," meaning to make the switch from fun half-time music to more serious concert music, for football season had barely ended two weeks before the first concert. Once again, however, the band gave a stupendous performance, always giving their fans the best.

Susan Young, a senior and voted most musical in her class, participated in a unique experience in 1987. During the weekend of November 6-8, she practiced and performed with the National Guild Youth Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

Sue auditioned by tape in April of 1987. She received her acceptance in June and was sent the music in September, giving her two months to prepare. On Friday morning, November 6, Sue and her mother set off for New York and the St. Moritz Hotel. Although the participants came from across the country, Sue did know some of the people through her experiences with various youth orchestras and Tanglewood. She found that performing with the orchestra in New York helped her learn how to work with other instruments and understand the differences in musicians across the country.

Sue was named first oboe and performed a solo, Cappricio Espanol, which was met with a tremendous ovation. In addition to the National Guild Youth Symphony Orchestra, directed by Joe Silverstein, the Harlem Boys' Choir, Winton Marsalis, and Leonard Pennario also performed.

In her future involvements in music, Sue will always remember her experience at Carnegie Hall.

Hooked on classics!!

Hooked on classics, anyone?? Well, orchestra students sure were, and so were their fans. Senior Laura Zappone loved classical music and enjoyed orchestra assemblies in the auditorium. Said she, "Our orchestra is unique and enjoyable."

Every morning in M-1, orchestra students could be heard practicing to perfect that enjoyable sound. Seriousness prevailed when it came to difficult pieces. Paying attention to the conductor, practicing at home, and studying scores all were part of being an orchestra member. However, the orchestra musicians surely will not forget the less serious and fun times they had in the music room, especially president Noel Christopher and Chris Hill, who made up silly tunes like the oriental violin tune.

This was not one of the pieces played at one of the many important company luncheons which the orchestra played for Digital. The group surely was not limited to concerts at the high school. They also entertained senior citizens at the Willow's Nursing Home in Westboro. Headed by director Ralph Metcalf, the orchestra had a terrific year.

This was quite a change from their previous outfits, which were long blue robes. The choir of 87-88 had a new dapper look and a new enthusiasm. With fifty-nine singers from grades nine through twelve, the Concert Choir boasted of many members accepted for Districts and receiving All-State recommendations. During the year, junior and senior choir members could be heard performing at the Congregational Church and carolling in various neighborhoods. Senior Andrea Lake said, "It's interesting-- but also a lot of hard work!" Most choir members agreed that the best part about their fifth period class was the fun spirit of their director, Mr. F (for Feldheimer).

All-district orchestra members: Brenda Milley, Marcia Noble, Juliet Baker, Cathy Nagorski, Rick Loheyde, Marsha Durbano, Samantha Olds, Yvonne Golay, Jessica Aro, and Cynthia Ennis.

Wouldn't it be easier if we could get organized?

The problem with clubs and organizations was that everybody wanted to get involved with everything. When members belonged to more than two clubs, things often got confusing. Meeting times overlapped, and activities got mixed up. Pep club, S.A.D.D., N.H.S., math team, it was hard to fit them all into a busy schedule. Joining clubs was the best way to meet a wide variety of people in the school. Of course, it would have been great if we'd been organized, but somehow we learned to live with the confusion.

Installation

Neither snow, sleet, nor rain stops the postman; however, weather elements certainly curtailed the Jobs for Bay State Graduates program from carrying on "business as usual." The Induction ceremony which was scheduled for the evening of December 15th was snowed out, and had to be postponed. When snow started falling on the evening of the postponement date, thing started looking very bleak. But members persevered, and despite a few travel problems, they FINALLY arrived safely and carried on the ceremony. On January 26th a reception was held for these members.

Jobs for Bay State Graduates is a program open to approximately 30 seniors who are interested in pursuing a career immediately upon graduation. JBSG educates these students on possible future employment opportunities, and in many cases the program starts them in their employment fields. Dawn Grady and Jennifer Tsouras have sampled working with toddlers at Kindercare, while Stacy Stewart had the opportunity to hostess at the Marriot, and now plans to further this career by studying restaurant and hotel management. The JBSG's activities also included planning career day programs, fundraisers, and attending state conferences.

Saturday morning arrived, cold and grey. It's 5:30 a.m. and most of the town's students were still at home, in bed, asleep; but not the NFL team, who had already assembled their gear to board the bus for a tournament. Moe Khan had his enormous radio in one hand, his briefcase in the other; Kate Pierce had her prose and poetry readings; Rochelle Cohen brought lemon juice for her sore throat; Alexandra Murray stared gloomily out of the bus window. The team president, Lauren Fournier, skidded into the parking lot - late, carrying the NFL's banner and the traditional Eagles tape, Hotel California. Brenda Emu and Lucy Tancredi lugged heavy magazine files that they would need to prepare for their extemporaneous speeches, and at last, Mrs. Kitty Viscardi took attendance and the bus lumbered off to yet another speech tournament. These young speakers would finally return bearing trophies and awards, late on that same wintry Saturday night.

The elementary school students of Shrewsbury were definitely given a treat when they attended the Halloween Party given by the National Honor Society, Student Council, and the Spirit Committee this year. Thanks to the coordination of Marylynne Moynihan, President of Student Council, and Kerry McGlone, President of the National Honor Society, this year's scary event was a complete success. Over 300 children filed into the Shrewsbury High School cafeteria showing off their frightening, funny, or original costumes. Once inside, these clowns, witches, and goblins had the choice to play at any of the 20 booths or to simply eat their candy and watch out for any low flying bats. If they were brave enough, the children ventured into the HAUNTED HOUSE, which was created annually under the direction of Jeff Robins. Whatever Joan Rivers' question to her audience could be applied to the Student Outreach Service now in its third year. The direction this organization took during the 87-88 season was to train student members in peer leadership. "Often times young people can open up to each other and discover they share common problems, whereas they may find this more difficult to do with adults," stated Roberta Dolan, one of the advisers of the group. Mrs. Judy DeFalco, school nurse and SOS advisor, concurred and added that "SOS and Peer Education continued to educate students as positive role models for underclassmen. It was also the second year the program was awarded a Commonwealth In-Service Grant from the Massachusetts Department of Education to develop Phase II- "training beyond substance abuse."

Junior Jeff Risk, one of the club's original members, commented that he joined to learn how to help his friends when they have problems in school or at home. Said he, "Regular Thursday meetings really helped me to help others." When Peer Education leadership is fully implemented, the school will win the benefit of improved student morale. Caring individuals clearly derive satisfaction from helping others and are willing to go out of their way to do so.

Cummings Presented Gold Key Award

Waiting in line at the New England Bank on Maple Avenue, the customer can now pleasurably observe the endeavors of our young artists. On display there are paintings by Tyrone Patenaude and Jennifer LaRosa. This is one objective of the newly formed Art Club - to make the school and town community aware of the talent these young artists possess.

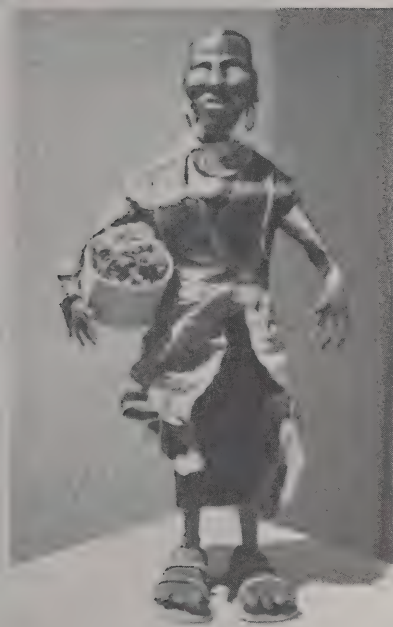

This winter, junior Sarah Cummings, an art student and Art Club member, received the Gold Key Award in the Boston Globe Art Show for her exhibit, an African figure made from coat hangers and other odd materials. Other honorable mentions in this competition went to Nicole Colbert, a senior, and Sophia Dumery, a sophomore.

According to Mr. Michael Smith, Adviser, the idea for an Art Club came about at Parents' Night this year at a parent's suggestion. Mr. Smith stated that the main objectives for this club were to motivate students in art by having their work critiqued by their peers, and to display their work publicly.

Kimberly Pierce, a senior art student, stated that the club "gives kids a chance to have their work exhibited and get feedback from fellow students."

International

Usually walking down the halls of Shrewsbury High, one easily recognizes familiar faces; however, there were always a few faces that appeared foreign, possibly transfer students or even foreign exchange students. This prompted several students to request the formation of the International Club. Mamta Maheshwary felt there was a definite need for these students to unite and took the initiative to find advisers. Mary Ann Abraham and Bob DeCoteau were approached by the students to help them out. According to Miss Abraham, "These kids saw a genuine need and are such really genuine people." Some objectives of the club were to expose students to their own traditions and culture and the merging into the American way of life, familiarize each other with common problems, form a welcoming committee for future foreign students, and celebrate foreign holidays. Their first actual function would be during the International Dinner sponsored by Team 8 White. They spoke about the club, and certain students related their own feelings on their new way of life. The club was really in the beginning stages of its development but with the help of the International Center in Worcester it would hopefully grow and even attract members who had not recently moved to the United States.

Anna Caralvo and Maria Laaksonen.

This boy sure enjoys being part of the International Club.

Wouldn't it be easier if

The yearbook was free?

The yearbook was big bucks.

Printing costs rose like everything else in our economy; and the class of '88 was responsible for raising money. Wouldn't it have been easier if the book was free? Well, yes, but one couldn't ask for the impossible. Doing our best to curb its cost by soliciting ads and selling pens and pencils, the sale price for the book was fortunately brought down to a reasonable sum.

Once again, the business people of Shrewsbury and surrounding communities generously donated funds to the Colonial in return for space in the Ad section. The Colonial staff thanks its supporters, and encourages its readers to patronize their businesses. It couldn't have been done without them.

Thanks also goes to all of the students' friends and relatives who printed their best wishes and became sponsors and patrons. As the fifty following advertisement pages attest, the senior class of '88 set a new record for ads.

Memories are priceless, but yearbooks weren't. Now, wasn't it worth saving our memories?

David Campaniello, eighth grade

"Will" life ever

I, Alex Argento, leave my youthful idealism to Sean, who always wanted it.
I, Leah Aspero, leave Alexis, Greer, and Shelley the 3 M's and Cindy the best of luck in the future Jail.
I, Carrie Austin, leave Chris, the last of the Austins to walk the halls of SHS, the traditional Green Hornet.
I, Karima Baroud, leave many happy memories, and I hope that all the underclassmen have as much fun as I did.
I, Sean Belanger, leave jumping out of windows to people with no minds, "See you next Tuesday, Ash!"
I, Shannon Belcher, leave my parents and Debby to deal with Kelly without me.
I, Susan Blake, leave rooms 304 and 306 to the artistically insane.
I, Amanda Bishop, leave my brother, Nathan, a master without a pupper, Karyn a big HUG, and the smoke-filled bathrooms to future cheerleaders.
I, Michael Bishop, leave my girlfriend Theresa Trembly for one more year at SHS.
I, Jason Bombard, leave "Largo Margo" to Mr. Smith in auto class and to all his future mechanics.
I, Richard J. Bonzagni, leave all of the luck and thanks to my Best Friend, as I leave on my Search.
I, Michael J. Bowles, leave nothing, 'cause nobody left me anything.
I, Andrea Boylan, leave Sarah to numb fingers and cold toes during Friday night football games.
I, Kathleen Brenner, leave SHS hoping to get a car for graduation.
I, Eric Bryan, leave a bucket of pucks to anyone who wants to work on their shot.
I, Michael P. Buck, leave because I earned it.
I, Michelle Lynn Brisson, leave all my close friends 1 more year, my brother Kevin 3 more years, and Paul and Kayne to stay out of trouble.
I, David Joseph Campaniello, leave Matt, Tap, Jeff, Jay, and especially Nelly a challenge to carry on the tradition that me, Nanoo, Diesel, and Oakie set.
I, Tom Cardosi, leave my groceries at Uncle Will's and my Twister board to Kim N. and Lynn I.
I, Cherri Lynn Chapman, leave all my Junior friends one more year at SHS.
I, Judith L. Chase, leave Jen Carpenter Mr. Zog's sex wax, toasty waves and a cool buzz, and Chrissy Lucchese any brain cells that she has left.
I, Larry Chick, leave all my off-road driving ability to Mike Zecco and his red Toyota 4x4.
I, Noel S. Christopher, leave my Diadora soccer cleats to anybody brave enough to go through another year with Coach Manzello.
I, Betsy Clark, leave Scott Ethier one more year of magnificent mellaphones.
I, Richard Clifford, leave to rule the world or never to be heard from again.
I, Ralph David Cochran, leave good memories and good times.
I, Rochelle Cohen, leave a hug and lots of love to my sister Alyce and Angels Gold to be produced.
I, Niki Colbert, leave to marry Dennis and live happily ever after.
I, Betsy Cowles, leave Beth Flynn a hop, skip, and a jump, my brother Andy lucky # 18, and my buddies from eighth grade a little piece of red paper.
I, Elizabeth Colosi, leave Dave our memories, our friendship, and many thanks, and Dana all my strength and love.
I, Colin Connelly, leave Steve Senosk a Central. Mass. Cross Country road map with a box of Cracker Jacks and Kix cereal.
I, Heather M. Cook, leave Mr. Hassett a day free from my trouble making, all band members 1st period frostbite, and Trina an oversized field hockey shirt.
I, Joanne Corazzini, leave my sister, Laurie, my black shoes.
I, Micheal Cox, leave because that's what you're supposed to do after graduation.
I, Karen Cramer, leave Lynne Iaccovelli all the "Ding Dongs" and whatever else it takes to become a tub of lard.
I, Angela Dauphinee, leave Diego and Davididamos in the corner, and Amy the mating call "AKEEM!"
I, Mary Davenport, leave Maura years of happiness.
I, Anneliese N. DeLuca, leave one pint of my strong ethnic Italian blood to the poor weak Irish underclassmen.
I, Rebecca Desforges, leave my heart to Jeff Risk, my thanks to Jason Holley, and my friendship to my buddy Ann Babigian.
I, Lisa Desmarais, leave any further education to anybody who wants it.
I, Brian DiBenedetto, leave another DiBenedetto for SHS and a close friend, Steve.
I, Cheri Drummond, leave Marsha Noble to lead the viola section, Good luck!
I, Greg Donnelly, leave Diesel the greatest of all awards, the SUCKER AWARD!!!
I, Deanna Dudley, leave my sister Krissy a new set of eye lashes and Michelle to a new boyfriend.
I, Dawn M. Duggan, leave everything I left undone.

I, John Duquette, leave my twister game that was so appreciated on Prom Night.
I, Joanna Dunn, leave seeing clearly with Johnny Cash and Kalli.
I, Shaughn Dwyer, leave the "88" football, the Death Pads whomever they wish.
I, Chris Eck, leave the Jig Saw and extra attachments to anyone who likes powertools.
I, Cheryl Erikson, leave hope for the future.
I, Tracy Lynne Favreau, leave JUDY "The Last Unicorn", CARYN with flames on her face, ERIN a party manual, and DONNA a muffler that she can't lose.
I, Cheryl Louise Fearn, leave as the last of the Fearn at Shrewsbury High with the hopes of great achievements equal to those of my sisters.
I, Jennifer J. Flaherty, leave Keville, Rogers, and Santora a Skor bar and April Warren with my syndrome.
I, Caryn Figueras, leave Rob McGowin the scary memories of the hop, Campie, Mike, and Diesel the best lumber, Campie my hat, and SHS with two more Figueras' to come.
I, Matt Finocom, leave all my tardies and absences to Mr. Nelson.
I, Deborah Fleming, leave Pammy, PatER, and Brender the freedom they never had when I was watching them.
I, Scott Fontana, leave my unique intelligence to my 2 year old nephew, Christopher Paul Goff.
I, Lauren Fournier, leave Alexandra a bloody lunchbox and much love.
I, Anne Marie Fowler, leave Aimee and Shelly 4 years of SHS to develop their own language and 1 insult to Jim Argento.
I, Robert Franklin, leave SHS comfortably numb.
I, Christopher Genatossio, leave valium for my brother Matt's teachers.
I, Beth Gordon, leave Grahame and Amy the minicam and editor to create many more leads and montages and David and Melinda all the fun and success that I had at SHS.
I, Jeff Gouley, leave Jeff Angel my court dominance.
I, Dawn Grady, leave my nickname Jugs to be carried on by Al and my knowledge of how to skip to Barry.
I, Thomas A. Graves, leave Jack "Sean" Freeman to anyone who can shut him up.

COLOPHON

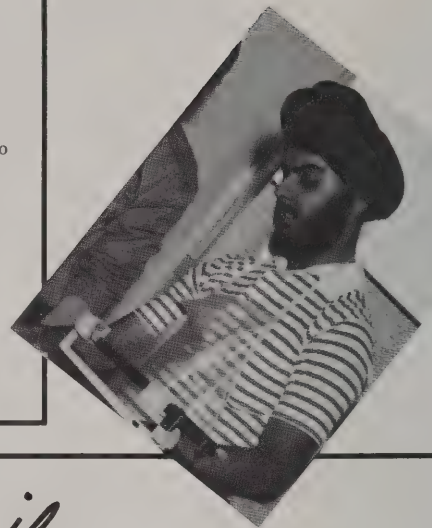

Jostens Printing and Publishing of State College, Pennsylvania printed 750 copies of the 1988 Colonial. Dan Smith, local representative, and Linda Nolf, in-plant consultant, aided in the publication process of the 308 page book. A 32 page supplement was printed to cover activities from February to June of 1988.

Most of the body copy was done in either 8 or 10 pt. Century Schoolbook; headlines were in 30 pt. Century Schoolbook Bold, and subheadlines were in 14 pt. Century Schoolbook Bold. Page numbers were in News Gothic, and Folio Tabs were in 9 pt. Century Schoolbook Bold.

The cover was designed by Susan Somlyody, class of 1988, and was five silkscreen inks applied to a silver Mylar material, wrapped around heavy weight Davey binder's boards.

Keegan and Grampietro Photography Studios of Shrewsbury were the official photographers for the class of 1988. Student photographers were Marcia Noble, 89, and Mark Welch, 89.

The 1987 Colonial earned a first place award from the American Scholastic Press Association, and a second place certificate from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association.

Wouldn't it be easier if ...

Looking back, it is really the great times which stand out in our memories. On the other hand, there was no question of a desire to leave Shrewsbury High by the time senior year rolled around. Those "Wouldn't it be easier if's" had begun to pile up, and the students were thinking, "Wouldn't it be easier if we could just graduate now?" But doing it the hard way and sticking around for senior year did pay off. The entire class of 1988 had certainly grown up, but still could enjoy the last days of their high school adolescence before hitting the real world. "In the end, aren't we all glad we didn't take the easy way out?"

I was just thinking...

"Wouldn't it have been easier if you smiled instead of frowned."
